Code Authority For Fuel Quits, Assailing NRA

Letter to Johnson Says Home Rule on Prices Is Shattered.

Focusing of Power Here Brings Rift

Authority Members Hold Entire Set-up Now Doomed to Fail.

By Raymond Clapper.

The National code authority for the retail fuel industry, which covers coal and coke, announced last night that it had resigned in a body as the result of a dispute with the National Recovery Administration.

Members said their action was taken reluctantly after a decision by NRA which they construed as taking away home rule over coal prices and shifting this control to recovery headquarters there.

In informing the recovery administration of their resignation, members of the code authority said this ruling created an intolerable situation, emasculated the code and rendered it futile and unworkable.

One of Largest Fields.

This break with NRA involves one of the largest industrial groups operating under the code structure. Some time ago the code authority for the baking industry resigned, but later rescinded its action.

The main complaint of the fuel code authority was that long delay would be involved in the ruling that price data must be reviewed at Washington by Dr. Leon Henderson's division of research and planning before becoming effective. Hitherto divisional code groups have worked out their own data after hearings and, upon approval of Government members of divisional code authorities, the lowest reasonable cost figures so agreed upon have become minimum prices for the areas concerned.

It is pointed out that there are some 700 trade areas in the coal industry, each working out its own price levels. To refer each of these cases to Washington for review would, the code authority members say, load an impossible job on a comparatively small organization in NRA. Moreover, they declare, it subjects the industry to the rule of bureaucracy here and deprives it of autonomy.

Members Listed.

Members of the retail solid fuel code authority sent their resignations to NRA Saturday, but withheld announcement until last night.

Col. G. A. Lynch, second in command at NRA, said there had been controversy over the price set-up in the coal industry, but that the mass resignation of the retail solid fuel code authority was news to him. He declined to comment until he had a chance to study the facts in the case. He said it would be unwise for anyone in NRA to com-

Phone Strikers In Havana Riot

Heavy Storm Quells Street Battle; Mendieta Calls Cabinet Session.

Havana, Sept. 3 (AP).—Warfare broke out in Havana again today as strikers attacked the Cuban telephone company's $3,000,000 office building with pistol and rifle fire, but a tropical storm broke over the terrified city at 1:40 p. m., the thunder drowning out the noise of shots and the rain driving the fighters to shelter.

Just as the storm broke military guards, on duty at the telephone building, had sent for machine gun reinforcements. Before the troops arrived the battle was over.

The Cuban government is operating the telephone service following the refusal of the company to reemploy 256 strikers.

In the telephone building there were 100 employes. The men armed themselves with pistols and rifles and aided soldiers. Many windows were shattered.

President Mendieta called an urgent session of the cabinet which went into immediate deliberation, and Secretary of War Granados conferred with United States Ambassador Jefferson Caffery.

At the height of the shooting, one soldier and one civilian were wounded. A policeman shot himself accidentally.

Blind Editor and Dog Scale Mountain Peak

Government Camp, Oreg., Sept. 3 (AP).—Although he is totally blind, Ed G. Robbins, publisher of a Portland weekly newspaper, has climbed the snow-capped summit of Mount Hood.

Aided by his police dog, Trebia, Robbins made the climb yesterday. Asked why he wanted to climb the peak, the blind editor said, "For the experience, man, for the experience!"

DOUGLAS DAVIS.

Cleveland, Ohio, Sept. 3 (AP).—Douglas Davis, 35-year-old transport pilot, flew down "suicide alley" to his death today in the Thompson Trophy contest, speed classic of the National Air Races.

The Atlanta, Ga., flier was hurtling through the air at a speed of 248 miles an hour when his Wedel-Williams racer crashed just after he had passed the back pylon, 7 miles from the municipal airport where 75,000 persons watched the racing.

Davis was leading the field when the accident happened. Col. Roscoe C. Turner, of Hollywood, Calif., was the eventual winner at a speed of 248.129 miles an hour.

U. S. Prepares Bid for Trade Of 6 Nations

Latin-American and Three European Countries Are Listed.

(Associated Press.)

Trade agreement negotiations with from four to six Latin-American and European countries will be announced by the State Department this week, possibly today.

Preliminary discussions clearing the way for active negotiations have been under way for some weeks with 12 countries. The nations to be designated will be from that list. While no official forecast has been issued, it is known that three or four nations in the Caribbean coffee-producing sector are ready for negotiations, and it is expected they will be extended to include some European nations, possibly Sweden, Finland and the Netherlands.

Announeement was made Friday that negotiations would begin next month with Brazil, one of this country's most important South American customers, and Haiti. Hearings on the proposed Haitian agreement will be held October 15, and on the Brazilian agreement on October 22.

Provisions of the new reciprocal agreement with Cuba, the first to be negotiated, went into effect yesterday although, due to the holiday, the first returns on imports from Cuba under the reduced tariffs will not be known until today.

Administration officials are confident the favored terms in the new Cuban agreement will greatly stimulate Cuban-American trade to the mutual benefit of both countries. A number of orders for American products already have been placed

Will o' Wisp, Hoover View Of New Deal

Flays Roosevelt Policies as a Usurpation of Human Rights.

Congress Also Censured for 'Dictator Powers' Given President.

Philadelphia, Sept. 3 (AP).—Condemning policies of the Roosevelt Administration, which he inferentially labels "will-o'-the-wisps," Herbert Hoover, in the current issue of the Saturday Evening Post, declares the American people are faced with "the issue of human liberty."

The former President, in his first discussion of political questions since he left the White House, decries "economic regimentation" and says:

"The whole thesis behind this program is the very theory that man is but the pawn of the State.

"It is a usurpation of the primary liberties of man by government. It is a vast shift from the American concept of human rights, which even the Government may not infringe, to those social philosophies where men are wholly subjective to the State. It is a vast casualty to liberty if it shall be continued."

Mr. Hoover's copyrighted article is titled: "The Challenge to Liberty."

Statement by Post.

The Saturday Evening Post released a portion and not the complete article for newspaper publication. In its statement accompanying the release, the magazine said:

"Although there is no mention of the present White House incumbent by name, a digest of the staggering number of powers delegated to the Chief Executive is made, with the author frankly in disagreement both with current Adminstration policies and with the un-American attitude of Congress in yielding virtually dictatorial powers to the President."

After sounding an opening theme of opposition to dictatorial governments throughout the world, Mr. Hoover writes:

"In haste to bring under control the sweeping social forces unleashed by the political and economic dislocations of the World War, peoples and governments are blindingly wounding, even destroying, those fundamental human liberties which have been the foundation and the inspiration of progress."

Liberty "Divine Gift."

Concerning the American scene, the former president writes:

"In every generation men and women of many nations have died that the human spirit might be free. In our race, at Plymouth Rock, at Lexington, at Valley Forge, at Yorktown, at New Orleans, at every step of the Western frontier, at Appomattox, at San Juan Hill, in the Argonne are the graves of Americans who died for this purpose.

"From these sacrifices and in the consummation of these liberties there grew a great philosophy of society—liberalism. The high tenet of this philosophy is that liberty is an endowment from the Creator to every individual man and woman upon which no power, whether economic or political, can encroach, and not even the Government may deny.

"Out of our philosophy grew the American Constitutional system,

Accompanying Branch were Robert Thatch, vice president of the Pan-American Airways; Lyman S. Peck, vice president and general manager of Pacific Alaska Airways and Bob Gleason, radio operator.

The party left Nome yesterday afternoon to meet a group of Soviet representatives of the trans-Siberian air routes at Whalen, on the northern Siberian coast.

Salvationists Headed By Evangeline Booth

EVANGELINE BOOTH.

London, Sept. 3 (U.P.).—Commander Evangeline Booth, descendant of the founder of the Salvation Army, tonight was elected head of that organization, succeeding Gen. Edward John Higgins.

Commander Booth won over Commissioner Henry Mapp, present chief of staff of the Salvation Army, her chief opponent for the post as general. She is 69, eldest daughter of William Booth, founder of the organization and its first head, and for years has headed the American branch of the army.

Mapp is leader of the "reform party" in the army, and had a strong following.

The election took place during a special meeting of the high council, in session here for the sole purpose of electing a successor to Gen. Higgins, who announced he intended to retire in November, whe.. he reaches 70.

500 Millions In New Taxes To Be Asked

Sum Needed When Old Measures Expire; Sales Levy Talk Revived.

(Associated Press.)

The Administration will be forced to ask the next Congress to enact a $500,000,000 tax bill in January because numerous levies now returning that sum to the Treasury will expire on July 1, 1935.

Already there is some talk about reviving the once defeated general sales tax to replace the existing so-called nuisance levies. Unless the Administration recommends the proposition, however, the chances for its adoption are considered slim.

The revenue question is being studied by Treasury and House Ways and Means Committee experts. Their recommendations are to be placed before President Roosevelt probably in November, when a ways and means subcommittee begins to formulate the new bill.

European System Studied.

Roswell Magill, Secretary Morgenthau's chief tax expert, and H. L. Parker, chief of the Ways and Means Committee staff, have spent the summer in Europe studying revenue systems with a view to bringing the information before the Administration.

That a general sales tax is the most prolific source of revenue is not denied by its opponents in the House and Senate. They claim, however, it would impose burdens on those least able to pay.

Robert L. Doughton, Democrat) North Carolina, chairman of the Ways and Mean Committee, who led the fight that resulted in the defeat of the sales tax in 1932, recently said he would favor that method of raising revenue "only as a last resort."

Not only will the new tax measure seek revenue to fill the gap that will result if the present manufacturers' excise and miscellaneous sales levies are allowed to drop

Nye Will Call Steel Trust in Arms Inquiry

Big U. S. Firms to Face Grilling in Hearing Opening Today.

By Robert C. Albright.

Spanning international boundaries on the scent of pyramiding munitions profits, a special Senate committee investigating traffic in wars today will plunge immediately into foreign tie-ups and arms interrelations of the American munitions industry.

Broad intimation that the so-called "steel trust" will figure prominently in latter phases of the inquiry was thrown out yesterday by Chairman Gerald P. Nye. Public hearings were set for this morning to formally launch the sweeping probe.

Senator Nye, who today will hear the Electric Boat Co. and its president, Henry R. Carse, told newspapermen utlimately he expects to summon executives of such industries as the United States Steel Corporation and the Bethlehem Steel Co.

The dapper, 43-year-old North Dakota Senator heading the investigating committee plans to lose no time today in getting at evidence that he says tends to show so-called "death merchantmen" backstage of every war and operating ove. international frontiers.

The silent shadow of the cunning Sir Basil Zaharoff, Greek munitions salesman who transferred his allegiance to Great Britain and won himself knighthood, will early play a role in committee disclosures, the chairman said. A

Cronin Fractures Arm; Lost to Nats For Rest of Year

The relentless jinx that has stalked the trail of the Washington ball club since the Nats broke their spring training camp yesterday caught up with Manager Joe Cronin.

Cronin played his last ball game of the 1934 season yesterday, removed from the line-up by a fractured forearm suffered in a spill at first base while running out a hit against the Red Sox.

Racing across the base, Cronin collided with Pitcher Wes Ferrell, of the Red Sox, in the eighth inning of the first game, and somersaulted toward the box seats, collapsing with his arm beneath him. Despite the pain, he finished the game, but relinquished his post to Ossie Bluege for the second game of the double-header.

X-ray photographs revealed that Cronin had fractured the radius bone in his forearm near the wrist and that he could not hope to rejoin the line-up for the remainder of the season.

Labor Steps In Proud File Despite Rain

Thousands Cheer Huge Demonstration on Holiday.

Workers Hear Attack on Roosevelt's Aids by Keating.

A full page of pictures of the Labor Day parades in Washington and Alexandria—Page 10.

The battalions of organized labor, drenched but not dispirited, paraded in the rain up Pennsylvania avenue yesterday to glorify human toil.

It was Washington's annual Labor Day parade, and in the line of march were craftsmen (and craftswomen) who could build a city, maintain it, and, if necessary, tear it down.

At the same time in Alexandria members of the National Firemen's Association were staging a colorful parade in connection with their annual convention.

Inclement weather forced cancellation of nearly all other Labor Day activities in Washington and vicinity.

Rains Throughout Parade.

The heavens, exempt from codes governing hours, ethics and fair practices, opened up just as Police Supt. E. W. Brown, guiding the parade, swing into the historic Avenue.

With a few intervals, the drizzle continued throughout the period of the parade, soaking the flags, the floats, and the marchers, not to mention the brave thousands who stood on the sidewalks to watch and applaud.

Bedraggled though they were, the marchers passed the reviewing stand on Constitution avenue near Fifteenth street with heads high and banners still aloft.

In a speech from the stand following the parade, Edward Keating, editor of Labor and the orator of the day, took a fling at some of President Roosevelt's lieutenants, saying:

"I still have faith in Franklin Delano Roosevelt. I can not say as much for many of his lieutenants. Some of those lieutenants have done a great job; some have sabotaged the 'New Deal' to an extent which has placed it in imminent jeopardy."

Mr. Keating did not name names, nor did he list any counts in his sabotage indictment.

Cavalry Leads Off.

John B. Colpoys, United States Marshal, who served as master of ceremonies, warned the assemblage against two groups, the radicals who would "poison" organized labor and the ultra-conservatives "such as may be found in the new American Liberty League." Colpoys "wondered" if the league, in addition to guarding the Constitution, were not guarding intrenched wealth against the just demands of labor.

The parade began moving up the Avenue at 10:09 a. m., with the crack Third Cavalry of Fort Myer in the van. Then came the Sixteenth Field Artillery, looking like an A. E. F. picture taken in the rain.

Fire Chief Charles E. Schrom followed at the head of a strange spectacle—five pieces of fire apparatus that constituted a sort of Alpha and Omega in that field.

First was the old fire engine, "Columbia," drawn by ten firemen manning a long rope. A sign said

Giant Shark Eats 18-Year-Old Girl Swimming in Sea

Susak, Yugoslavia, Sept. 3 (AP).—A giant man-eating shark weighing 3,800 pounds devoured 18-year-old Agnes Novak while she was swimming in the Adriatic Sea, local police reported today.

The shark was captured after fishermen fought it three hours, the police said. Its huge stomach, ripped open, disclosed the girl's mangled body.

Yugoslav newspapers were ordered to suppress the story, because it was thought tourists would be frightened away from Adriatic beaches.

U. S. Neutral In Mill Strike, Hopkins Says

HARRY L. HOPKINS.

By Leon Dure, Jr.

Hyde Park, N. Y., Sept. 3 (Spl.).—As President Roosevelt quietly observed Labor Day by giving a picnic, one of his guests, Relief Administrator Harry L. Hopkins, proclaimed anew the Government's neutrality in the National textile strike.

"If they think we are going to underwrite their strike," he declared, "they are sadly mistaken. And they will find it out soon enough."

Mr. Hopkins repeated, as a set policy, that the FERA will continue to come to the rescue of those in dire need, irrespective of strikes, but that this was not be taken as

Observer Sees 'Shore' G.O.P. Solid for Nice

Party Leaders Denounce Goldsborough Despite Old Popularity.

This is the second of a series of articles on the Maryland political situation, prior to the primary election September 12, by Mr. Waltman, who is making a tour of the State.

By Franklyn Waltman, Jr.

Easton, Md., Sept. 3.—On the Eastern Shore and in Harford and Baltimore Counties, immediately adjoining the shore, the trend among Republicans appears to favor Harry W. Nice, candidate of that party for Governor.

Taking these 11 counties as a whole, Mr. Nice is receiving the major organization support, has on his side the most militant Republican newspapers and, in general, appears to have laid the groundwork for his nomination more efficiently than either of his opponents—Senator Phillips Lee Goldsborough or H. Webster Smith.

Both of these men have support in this section, but Mr. Nice, on the surface, at least, appears far ahead of them.

It might be supposed, on the record of past performances, that the candidacy of Senator Goldsborough would have a strong appeal to Eastern Shore Republicans. Senator Goldsborough is a native of Dorchester County and he has close friends and influential relatives scattered about that section.

Moreover, he is well known on the Shore, having campaigned up and down it since the early nineties. Although he rarely spoke during his Gorman Says 100,000 Responded to First Strike Call.

Labor Day Busy In Southern Mills

Surveys Show Split Among Workers in Many Areas.

By Douglas Warrenfels.

A decisive test of strength in the ominous Nation-wide textile strike is expected today as several thousands mills from Maine to Alabama seek to reopen.

Fears of bloodshed failed to materialize yesterday in the operation of many Southern plants in disregard of Labor Day. The walkout orders became effective, technically, Saturday night.

The actual number of workers answering the strike call was hotly disputed. George A. Sloan, Cotton Textile Institute chairman, said a "preponderance" of wage earners refused to quit, while Francis J. Gorman, strike chairman, said that 100,000 men and women had deserted the looms and spindles.

"We had a better response than we expected this early," Gorman commented. "Just wait until tomorrow. We'll have 1,000,000 people out in a few days."

From Hyde Park, N. Y., came word that President Roosevelt was watching the tie-up closely. There was no indication, however, that he intended to intervene.

Harry L. Hoqkins, Federal emergency relief administrator, a visitor at the summer White House, warned that the Government would not "underwrite" the strike. He said needy strikers would be fed by his organization just like all other destitute so long as the union failed to violate orders of a Federal mediation agency.

Gorman denied charges by Benjamin Kaminsky, president of the Silk Manufacturers Association of Paterson, N. J., that the United Textile Workers were under contract not to strike there unless 40 per cent of the industry outside of Paterson became involved in a walkout.

Gorman Denies Silk Pact.

"The silk strike will go on," Gorman said. "The United Textile Workers, as such, has no contract with the Paterson mills."

He shrugged his shoulders when informed of a warning by Kaminsky that the Paterson manufacturers never would sign another union contract if their plants were involved in the strike. Asked to comment on reports that he canceled a speech in Charlotte, N. C., for fear he would be kidnaped by antiunionists, Gorman countered:

"That's what the papers say."

"What do you say?" a reporter insisted.

"We don't expect anything of that sort," Gorman responded.

Gorman said he had no conferences scheduled with the National Labor Relations Board, which probably will resume today its attempts to mediate the controversy.

He cautioned reporters not to be "misled" by statements from the Cotton Textile Institute on the number of employes in the industry and their wages.

"It is a well-known fact," he said, "that the management of the industry keeps two sets of books. One set can always be used to put their best foot forward and not expose real conditions in the plants."

Early reports, he said, indicated that the union has marked strength among 25,000 employes in cotton textile dyeing and finishing plants.

"We'll concentrate on getting the

Two Army Fliers Die, Third Hurt in Crash

Shreveport, La., Sept. 3 (AP).—Less than an hour after their bimotored observation plane cleared Barksdale Field for Natchitoches this afternoon, two members of the Army Air Corps from Brooks Field, San Antonio, Tex., were killed and a private from the same post was injured in a crash during a rainstorm.

The dead were Cadet Neal Caldwell and Private Betz Baker. Private P. K. Martin battered his way from the wreckage just before flames engulfed it and was only slightly injured.

One Killed, 5 Hurt in Auto Smash-up Near Alexandria

One man was killed and five others were injured, two of them seriously, late yesterday afternoon in a head-on crash of two automobiles on the Alexandria highway near Four Mile Run.

The dead man was Marvin L. Williams, 30, of Roanoke, Va.

The injured:

Dennis Williams, 25, of 5519 Sherrier place, northwest, lacerations and shock; Allen Mitchell, 22, also of Sherrier place, fractured skull and internal injuries; Mrs. R. B. Kennedy, 35, Durham, N. C., broken nose and sprained ankle; her son, Joseph Kennedy, 13, possible fracture of the skull; and her daughter, Virginia, 15, several broken ribs and internal injuries.

The car in which Marvin Williams was riding was en route to Washington while the other, driven by Mrs. Kennedy was bound toward Alexandria.

Scores of motorists rushed to give aid to the injured. All were placed in automobiles and brought to the Emergency hospital here. Williams died an hour after reaching the hospital.

Arlington County police last night said they had not learned enough to place responsibility for the crash.

Victims of the accident were unable to give a coherent account of what happened.

Mrs. Willis Van Devanter Dies Of Heart Attack in Germany

Mrs. Willis Van Devanter, wife of the Associate Justice of the Supreme Court, died Sunday in Wiesbaden, Germany, according to word received here yesterday. Her death was caused by a heart attack. She had been staying at the Hotel Rose in Wiesbaden with Justice Van Devanter and was believed to have been preparing to return home.

Mrs. Van Devanter had not been well for some time. A stroke of paralysis several years ago caused her to abandon much of her social activity here.

Besides the Justice, she is survived by two sons, Winslow and Isaac Van Devanter, both are residents of Washington.

Mrs. Van Devanter, the former Dollie Burhans, daughter of Winslow Paige and Rachel Ann Burhans, was born in Ionia, Mich., about 72 years ago. She married Mr. Van Devanter in 1883 and accompanied him to Cheyenne, Wyo., which was then the heart of the Indian country. Her husband played a prominent part as a lawyer and lawmaker in Wyoming affairs. He entered the Legislature and finally was appointed chief justice of the Territorial supreme court by President Harrison in 1889.

In 1897 an appointment as Assistant Attorney General brought the Van Devanters to Washington. They remained here until 1903, when Mr. Van Devanter was appointed by President Theodore Roosevelt as a circuit court judge. Several years later he was appointed to a vacancy on the Supreme bench. He received his appointment from President Taft, joined him on the court later.

Mrs. Van Devanter and her husband have lived here ever since. No plans for the funeral have yet been announced.

Strikers Active In Carolinas; TestDueToday

60,000 Workers in 200 Mills Out; 75,000 on the Job.

Charlotte, N. C., Sept. 3 (AP).—A general strike pierced the heart of the Nation's textile industry today, left 200 mills and 60,000 workers idle in the Carolinas, and tonight gathered strength for Tuesday's climactic test, when all Southern mills are expected to resume operations after Labor Day.

Unofficial estimates placed the number of employes at work today at approximately 75,000.

Strikers forced shut-downs in approximately 100 Piedmont Carolina mills today, and about the same number of plants announced they were observing Labor Day—for the first time in history and most of them on last moment decisions.

Two hundred and twenty mills were reported operating in the two States, while strike leaders organized "flying squadrons" in an attempt to close them.

Closing of 7 Plants Forced.

In one such case, at Kings Mountain, N. C., strikers from Shelby forced the closing of seven plants employing approximately 2,800 workers.

Finding no difficulty in closing plants in their own town, which was highly organized, the Shelby group, about 900 strong, formed a motorcade, went to Kings Mountain and persuaded nonunion workers to quit their posts.

Similar tactics, members of the motorcade said, were planned against the Cannon Mills, which operate large plants in Kannapolis, Concord, Albemarle and other towns, employing more than 15,000 workers, none of whom struck today.

Gov. Blackwood of South Carolina ordered National Guardsmen to duty late today at the Victor Mills in Greer and the Pacific Mills at Lyman. Tension was declared high in the two communities where the mills operated in defiance of the strike. Two companies already were on guard at Seneca, S. C., where the Lonsdale mill reopened after a six-week strike. Picketers faced guardsmen armed with bayoneted rifles, and workers entered unmolested.

Path Opened for Workers.

At Hickory the Brookford mill was unable to operate, even after sheriff's officers opened a path through pickets for any who wanted to work. One woman was reported struck in a brief skirmish as the gates were opened, but she was not seriously injured.

Gaston County, center of the world's combed yarn industry, was quiet and only a handful of its 104 mills sought to operate. They observed Labor Day, and a majority announced they would attempt to reopen tomorrow morning. Some, however, indicated they might not attempt to operate in the face of the strike call. The real situation there was expected to be shown at the opening time Tuesday. About 25,000 work in the county's plants.

The Loray plant of the Manville-Jenckes Co., scene of bloody riots in 1929, which ended with the conviction of seven Communists for slaying O. F. Aderholt, chief of police, operated part of today, but closed down due to slender staffs and a Labor Day celebration.

Mindful of the 1929 trouble, police forces at the celebration scene were augmented after Police Chief Carl Elliott said he received reports from Charlotte that Communist forces planned a counter-demonstration. The Communists failed to appear however, and the celebration was without untoward incident.

Centers Present Contrasts.

Two other great textile centers presented striking contrasts. Every plant in Greenville County, S. C., was reported running, all of them with full forces except two.

A few miles away, in Spartanburg County, 17 plants, employing 9,050 workers, were closed, while 4,370 were at work in 10 plants. Many of those which did not operate today claimed they would do so tomorrow.

Many plants were not able to start up this morning while others found a steady drift from the machines too great for continued operations, and intermittent closedowns were reported during the day.

Little effect was noted in Alabama, where strikes have been in progress at 26 mills for some time.

Between 12,500 and 14,000 Alabama workers already were out. Union leaders predicted 8,000 to 12,000 more would join them this week, but manufacturers said they doubted the total would be swelled by more than 2,000.

Virginia and Georgia, the other major textile manfacturing States in the South, awaited tomorrow morning to learn the real meaning of the strike for them. At Danville today 5,000 workers reported for duty. Union officials said the local there had yet to decide its course. So far, it has not pledged support of the National strike committee, as have most other locals in the South.

National Coal Code Authority Quits, Holding NRA Unfair

ment until after careful study of the letter of the code authority. General Johnson and most other NRA officials were absent on the holiday.

Members of the code authority, in their letter to NRA, declared the Recovery Administration must assume full responsibility for this outcome. They said that increasing inability to obtain compliance from members of the industry had been encountered, due to the lack of a fixed policy on the part of NRA. They charged that the Government had failed to take aggressive action to curb chiselers and that law-abiding members of the industry had found their hands tied while competitors violated the code with impunity.

Members of the code authority who resigned in a body were:

Roderick Stephens, New York, chairman; Milton E. Robinson, jr., Chicago, vice chairman; Clarence V. Beck, St. Louis; William A. Clark, Boston; Charles M. Farrar, Raleigh, N. C.; Edward B. Jacobs, Reading, Pa., and John McLachlan, Pulman, Ill.

The letter of resignation, addressed to Gen. Hugh L. Johnson, said:

"The members of the National Code Authority for the retail solid fuel industry hereby resign, effective at once.

"The last hope for effective results has just been destroyed by the announcement that the provisions of this code may be modified at will by NRA without prior notice to or consent of the industry. It is our view that the code and the act provide a specific and orderly method of modification, and the administrator may not on his own initiative arbitrarily impose amendments.

"The interpretation of the code today, in the light of NRA memoranda which are being given the effect of code amendments, is at complete variance with its intent and effect as originally approved. As now emasculated by NRA, the code is a futile and unworkable thing, while as originally agreed upon it represented a constructive basis for improvement of conditions in this industry.

Says Hope Given Up.

"If the fundamentals of a code are to change with changes of viewpoint and changes of personnel who utterly lack understanding of the problems of the industry, then this truly is a government of men and not a government of law. Vacillating policies, constant delays in securing decisions vital to administration, and disregard of clear understandings originally entered into with this industry at the time the code was approved, make it evident that there is no hope for effective administration or enforcement. To continue to attempt to function under these conditions is impossible.

"The National code authority and divisional code authorities have uniformly accepted their responsibilities in sincerity and good faith. They have attempted to function in spite of constant obstacles and disappointments. Upon NRA must rest the full responsibility for this outcome.

"It is a matter of deep regret that this industry, which has assumed a substantial burden of increased wages and reduced hours of labor as its contribution to National recovery, has not been permitted by NRA to demonstrate the practicability of its code as a means to bring about its own rehabilitatoin.

Charge Law Flouted.

"Constantly increasing inability of divisional code authorities to obtain voluntary compliance from members of the industry is the natural result of the lack of a fixed policy and purpose on the part of NRA. Chiselers have willfully violated this code, and efforts to obtain redress at law have, with few exceptions, not received prompt or aggressive support from the various agencies of the Government. To tie the hands of law-abiding and self-respecting persons who recognize their obligations under this code, while others are permitted to violate its provisions with impunity, is an intolerable situation.

"This conclusion has been reached, and this course of action taken, with reluctance and regret, after the most careful and thoughtful consideration by all members of the Natoinal code authority and after exhausting all reasonable efforts to compose our differences with your administrative officer, the divisional administrator and the deputy administrator concerned with this code.

"The secretary of the National code authority has been instructed to deliver this communication to you or one of your representatives, after which it will be released to the press."

The code authority also issued a statement in which it recounted its efforts to adjust the conflict with NRA.

The dispute centered around the provision concerning "lowest reasonable cost" which, when agreed upon, becomes the minimum price below which no member under the code may sell. This procedure is invoked wherever an emergency is found to exist due to destructive price cutting.

Members of the code authority said they were warned by NRA that unless they accepted the plan calling for review of cost figures at Washington, the whole provision of the code would be held inoperative. The code authority challenged the right of NRA to modify the code without notice or agreement.

Three Injured As Autos Skid On Wet Roads

Holiday Mishaps, Caused by Traffic and Weather, Center in Warrenton.

Wet roads and heavy Labor Day traffic sent several Washington motorists to the Fauquier County Hospital at Warrenton, Va., for treatment yesterday for injuries suffered in four skidding accidents.

Francis Jameson, 34, of 1308 Twentieth street northwest, received a broken collarbone and his wife suffered cuts and shock when their car skidded through a fence, crashing down a 40-foot embankment on the Washington road, five miles from Warrenton. The car was demolished. After treatment at the hospital they returned to Washington by train.

While traveling to Washington from the Cascades Country Club, Hot Springs, W. Va., after a week-end spent there, Richard A. Welch, a lawyer of Keyser, W. Va., suffered three broken ribs when his car skidded and overturned 2 miles north of Warrenton. His son, Richard A. Welch, jr., 19, was unhurt in the accident.

At Opal, Va., 8 miles south of Warrenton, a car driven by W. T. Johnson, 24, of Lynchburg, Va., collided with a coupe driven by J. J. Henley, 45, a contractor, of 1210 Kearney street northeast, Washington. Both men escaped serious injury.

Mrs. D. C. Sands, owner of the Benton Stables, Middleburg, Va., and Mrs. Thomas Davis, of New York, narrowly escaped injury when their car skidded from the road, plunging down a 15-foot embankment near Luray, Va., while they were en route to the Warrenton Horse Show. They proceeded after a wrecking car had pulled their machine from the ditch.

Labor Secretary's Sedan Overturns

Mrs. Perkins Badly Shaken in Crash in Maine.

Brunswick, Me., Sept. 3 (AP).—Frances Perkins, Secretary of Labor, was badly shaken, but otherwise uninjured, when her automobile overturned today on the State highway near here.

Accompanied by a woman said to be her secretary and a chauffeur, Mrs. Perkins was en route from her summer place at Newcastle to Boston, where she was to make a Labor Day radio address.

Mrs. Perkins' sedan was forced into a ditch to avoid a collision. Mrs. Perkins and her companion went to a nearby inn and later traveled to Portland by taxi. After resting at a Portland hotel, she continued to Boston by train. Her radio appearance was postponed until later in the evening.

dyers out," he explained, "because they're the bottlenecks of the industry.

Gorman emphasized the intention of the union to insist on elimination of the so-called stretch-out, a practice under which operators are required to man an unusually large number of machines. He denied charges by Sloan that the stretch-out constituted a false issue.

"Let me tell Mr. Sloan that the stretch-out is no smoke screen and he knows it," Gorman observed.

"Mr. Sloan has never been victimized by the stretch-out, nor have those with whom he is associated. Perhaps it is a purely academic matter with some of them, but mostly it is a case of getting the last ounce of work out of mill workers.

"If the stretch-out is a smoke screen, why is it that men and women collapse at their work and frequently have to be carried out? We have said minds and bodies give way under the terrible strain of this modern industrial torture and we know what we are talking about."

Gorman protested that Sloan sought to confuse the public. "The stretch-out is one of the main issues of the strike," he said. "It is an issue because the stretch-out is a fact, not a myth, as Mr. Sloan would like the public to believe.

"The strike will not end until the stretch-out, which puts an unbearable load on the worker, is done away with forever. Our people are going to stand up straight when this strike is over."

'Shore' G.O.P. Seen Solid Behind Nice

six years in the Senate, Mr. Goldsborough over here has a reputation as an orator. Gray-haired men now recall how as youths they were thrilled with the oratory of Phil Goldsborough as he spoke at crossroads meetings. His oratory is of the country, home and mother style, which is effective in rural communities.

Having arrived on the Shore, however, the observer is struck by the sharpness with which the Old Line Republican leaders denounce Mr. Goldsborough. Perhaps this is because they are committed to either Mr. Nice or Mr. Smith and fear Senator Goldsborough's appeal to the rank and file of Republican voters.

Yet, so far, Senator Goldsborough has not made any speeches in this campaign. In at least one half of the 11 counties now under review, the Republican leaders privately assailed Mr. Goldsborough as "selfish," as suffering from "political itch to hold office," and as seeking to doom his party chances in the general election.

These leaders hold that the Senator made an impossible candidate to face Governor Ritchie. They pointed out that his vote several years ago to confirm the nomination of John J. Parker to be a justice of the Supreme Court had alienated the Negro vote of the State. They also contend that as an officer of the Baltimore Trust Co. Mr. Goldsborough's nomination would make it impossible for his party to raise against Gov. Ritchie a charge of bad banking administration with heavy losses to Maryland depositors.

Rockefeller Planning To Winter in Florida

Daytona Beach, Sept. 3 (AP).—John D. Rockefeller plans to come South to Ormond Beach "sometime next month," it was said at the Casements, his winter home there, today.

Remodeling of the Casements, including installation of a small passenger elevator so the aged philanthropist will not have to walk up and down stairs, has been accomplished this summer.

Large Plants In New England To Stay Shut

Sentiment in That Area Sharply Split Among 250,000 Workers.

Pawtucket, R. I., Sept. 3 (AP).—New England's 250,000 textile workers prepared tonight for the general textile strike's first showdown in this area tomorrow after the Labor Day holiday when several hundred mills sound their whistles to summon workers who may or may not respond.

Officials of the United Textile Workers from Joseph Sylvia, New England organizer, down, insist that the workers won't go back.

Many mill owners, on the other hand, assert they will. A few large mills, such as the Amoskeag at Manchester, N. H., have temporarily avoided the necessity of finding out by announcing shutdowns.

The union workers were spurred to action today by fighting speeches of Thomas F. McMahon, president of the United Textile Workers, who, speaking at Providence, sounded a call to positive action.

Other labor organizers speaking at a half a dozen textile centers urged their hearers to hold firm and victory would be theirs. Picketing will be general, even at Manchester, where the Amoskeag is to remain closed.

Textile workers were advised by Mayor Frederick Mansfield, of Boston, in a Labor Day address, not to "delay National recovery" by striking in these "unsettled times."

Communists Seek to Join.

At New Bedford, home of many large cotton mills, William E. G. Batty, secretary of the local textile council, revealed he had been approached by representatives of the National Textile Union, a Communist organization, with the proposition that they join hands with the United Textile Workers.

Union pickets have been instructed not to participate in any disorders which may be started by Communist groups.

In several cities agreements were reached during the day between locals and police officials to limit the numebr of persons permitted on mill properties to police, a small number of pickets and newspapermen.

Strike interest among the workers was by no means uniform throughout New England. In several western Massachusetts communities, notably in Adams and North Adams, workers, both union and nonunion, were reported apathetic and there was said to be little reason to believe they would respond to the strike call.

From Lawrence came somewhat similar advices, while in Fall River a strong independent union, the American Federation of Textile Operatives, said to represent 5,000 employes, has gone on record in opposition to the strike.

any direct support of the movement. This practice will be followed, except in cases where those requesting aid may be violating orders of some mediation agency of the Government.

Meantime, Mr. Roosevelt continued to exhibit the same unconcern, outwardly at least, that he has shown since the strike first threatened. It was believed that he felt the Government, through efforts of the National Labor Relations Board, has done all it could to halt the scheduled walkout tomorrow of almost 1,000,000 workers.

Like millions of others, the President and Mrs. Roosevelt consumed most of the day at their picnic, which was held on the lawn of the little Dutch cottage at Val-Kill, on the western end of the Roosevelt estate. To it were invited all members of the Presidential party, Washington correspondents, Secret Service men, State troopers and chauffeurs.

It was an "off-the-record" interlude in the President's vacation, which his ruddy complexion and cheery good spirits showed he is enjoying to the utmost. Among the guests was an imposing number of "brain-trusters" and Government executives, who participated with the President in the informal fun.

They included Secretary of the Treasury Henry Morgenthau, jr., who drove over from his neighboring estate at Fishkill in his riding boots; Dr. Rexford G. Tugwell, Undersecretary of Agriculture; Oscar L. Chapman, Assistant Secretary of Interior; George N. Peek, president of the Export-Import Bank, and Mr. Hopkins.

Mr. Peek was the latest arrival, coming up from Washington with Mrs. Peek today. He will stay over tomorrow to explore with the President the prospects of stimulating foreign trade through the extension of credits by his new agencies. The Tugwells, Hopkinses and Chapmans, who have been guests at Hyde Park House since Friday, left tonight.

Although the visits developed little in the way of news, observers were impressed by the warm cordiality existing between the President and his chief lieutenants. Only yesterday, the President suggested Dr. Tugwell's removal as pitcher in a neighborhood baseball game, and all appeared to enjoy the exaggerated accounts of it in the press.

Mr. Roosevelt's principal engagement tomorrow is with Upton Sinclair, former Socialist who won the Democratic nomination for Governor of California. While politics has been ruled out as a subject of conversation, it was obvious that much depended on their talk. From Hyde Park, Mr. Sinclair will go to Washington to see Mr. Hopkins and Postmaster General James A. Farley.

Miss Booth Wins 'Army' Command

serious controversial problem which confronted the council when it removed Gen. Bramwell Booth on the grounds of his poor health. The struggle started then between the British and American leaders for dominance.

Considerable opposition developed against Commander Booth on the grounds her selection would tend to perpetuate the Booth succession. The council previously had gone on record as opposed to a so-called dynastic rule.

Commander Booth said:

"The spirit of the organization will continue, regardless of who is general. Its devoted men and women, trained and inspired workers in the effort to lift upward those unfortunate persons in the lowest strata of human society, are steadfast in their purpose."

She said her "compensation" for a life of service to society was "the joy of service—of practical service."

Officials refused to divulge the majority by which Commander Booth was elected, but it was generally understood to have been a close ballot.

Youths to Seek Gold Ownership By Court Fight

Baltimore, Sept. 3 (Spl).—Attorneys representing two boys, who found $11,424 in gold buried in the cellar of a house in East Baltimore last week, will file action in court tomorrow in a move to determine legal ownership of the treasure.

Harry O. Levin, of the firm representing the youths, refused to make pubic the exact nature of the action he plans to file, but said he would have news of an "interesting nature" tomorrow. The owners of the house where the money was discovered are also said to be planning court action.

Meanwhile, the boys, Theodore Jones, 17, and Henry Grove, 16, today returned to the cellar to resume digging, in the hope they might find more treasure. Many residents in the neighborhood also have begun digging in their cellars, hoping to find hidden gold.

A plumber who three weeks ago dug up most of the cellar floor at the "treasure house," preparatory to laying pipes, appeared today at the Jones home and extended congratulations to Theodore.

that "Columbia" was retired in 1863 because it was too old.

"Rarin' to Go."

Then came a fire engine of the vintage of 1925. This engine was old, too, a sign proclaimed, but it still must go to fires—a hint to Congress and the taxpayers.

The spectators next saw a fire-fighting machine but recently put into service, and they read this placard: "I'm young and active, too. And rarin' to go."

Came then the Firemen's Band, which was to win a prize; a number of floats, including one depicting the Three Pigs and the Big Bad Wolf, also a prize winner, and several pieces of apparatus from towns in Maryland.

The groups composing the Washington Building Trades Council came through the rain next, with a giant redread, flanked by two colored men, carrying the flag.

Workers Carry Flags.

Behind them came stalwart boilermakers, carpenters, electricians, engineers, glaziers, ironworkers, painters, plasterers and all the other workers whose skill enters into the building of a modern city.

Almost without exception, these men carried little American flags. Drawing abreast of the reviewing stand, one of them cried:

"We stand by our country."

"You bet we do," shouted back Master of Ceremonies Colpoys.

Columbia Typographical Union had a large delegation in line. Cheers arose as the dean of the union, 94-year-old W. W. Maloney, passed by in a car.

Post Veteran in March.

Another veteran marched along at the head of The Washington Post Chapel of the Typographical Union. He was Louis Ferber, a Post employe for 50 years.

Inspired by the blare of "The Washington Post March," Ferber strutted along with the youngest of them, carrying a banner the while.

The Post men wore white hats, white shirts and white trousers and, like the other marchers, they carried miniature flags.

Many Comic Touches.

Comic touches were numerous. Among the building laborers in line was a man in khaki work clothes upon whose head perched a high silk hat.

The Abner Drury Brewery had several trucks in line, one of which contained some merry fellows waving steins of beer.

A bakery truck had a colored boy perched on its hood, and all around him were luscious tarts and pies.

As the parade broke up at Seventeenth street and Constitution avenue, the firemen turned toward Alexandria, where the National Firemen's Association was staging its parade.

Union employes of The Washington Post marched briskly in the Labor Day parade yesterday, led by J. Louis Ferber, of the Typographical Union, who is nearing the 50-year mark in the service of The Post. Printers, pressmen, stereotypers and mailers to the number of 132 were in The Post section.

30,000 in Alexandria See Greatest Parade

3,000 March in the Rain in National Firemen's Association Display; Many Prizes Won by Washington Delegations.

Alexandria saw its greatest parade yesterday.

For an hour and a half through intermittent rain the National Firemen's Association sent 3,000 marchers down Washington street in the biggest and most colorful procession the city of George Washington and the colonial fathers has seen in its long lifetime.

Parade officials counted 30,000 in the crowd that gathered to view the climactic finish to the twelfth annual firemen's convention. The rain kept away the other 90,000 they had expected.

Everything from plain, ordinary, every-day foot soldiers to tableaux representations of the progress of fire fighting was there. They even had a clown.

The march started within two minutes of its announced time and proceeded with few interruptions. The Washington contingent, which an hour earlier had marched for labor in the Capital, drew a flattering share of the crowd's approval, and walked off with a corresponding portion of the awards.

Prizes to Washington.

The first prize for the best appearing ladies unit went to Washington. The Capital's Fort Stevens Post of the American Legion copped second place for the snappiest drum and bugle corps. The District's Fifth and Seventh Battalions were first and second among the fire floats. The judges found the Fourth Washington Battalion and the Fire Prevention Bureau of the Capital entered the float best representing fire prevention. A tableau of the "Three Little Pigs" won first place in the comic float class for No. 31 Engine Company of Washington. And the Washington Gas Light Co. Band and the Boys' Independent Band of Washington, were first and second in the band contest.

The parade was 5 miles long. One hundred fire companies were represented. There were 25 bands and drum and bugle corps and 65 pieces of fire fighting equipment, most of them sirens screaming. There were firemen in it from 12 States.

The city put on its best parade clothes. The marchers theirs. Rain blended the colors of both. Flags hung over Washington streets, limp and dripping. A ladies auxiliary unit wore red crepe paper hats and sashes. Their white dresses looked blood splattered. For two blocks up and down King street rain smeared the National colors.

Led by Col. Cootes.

Col. Harry N. Cootes, U. S. A., grand marshal, led the procession with a police escort. Closely following came the chief of staff, Capt. Charles W. King, of Alexandria, with his staff, Col. Llewellyn Powell, Lieut. Col. Jarvis Butler and Maj. Guy. N. Church.

Near the front ranks were the Citizens Band of Alexandria, Mayor E. C. Davison, members of the city council and other city officials. Then came Fort Humphreys' famed Thirteenth Engineers Band, the engineers themselves, a battalion of blue jackets from the destroyers Fox and Humphreys and a company of Coast Guard from the cutter Apache.

In the reviewing stand were many officials from adjoining Virginia communities and the District, including Brig. Gen. S. G. Waller, the adjutant general. The War Between the States was represented by Col. Edgar Warfield, sr., 92 years old, and the sole survivor in Alexandria of the Confederate Army.

Prize Winners.

The festivities tapered off with band, drum and bugle corps and first-aid contests in the stadium and the distribution of scores of silver cups and plaques that were the reward of the snappiest marchers and the makers of the best-liked floats. The list of prize winners follows:

The company with the largest number of men in line, Poughkeepsie, N. Y., first; Newfane, N. Y., second; Frederick, Md., third. Alexandria Chosen Again.

Alexandria, the home town of one of the Nation's earliest volunteer firemen, George Washington, was selected by the association as the city for its 1935 convention contrary to expectations of officials that the event, the Capital's for 11 years, would be brought back here.

The Alexandria invitation was extended by Dan S. Hollenga, Chamber of Commerce business manager. In an address of welcome at the convention's solitary business meeting Saturday night, Mayor Davison expressed the hope that its visiting firemen would return.

On motion of Henry B. Jonhson, of Cabin John, Md., the association reelected its present officers for another year.

Officers Renamed.

NRA Favoring Capital Class, Green Charges

"Interests" Considered at Expense of Idle, He Declares.

Wichita, Kans., Sept. 4 (AP).—William Green, President of the American Federation of Labor, asserted today that employer and investor interests had been given "too much consideration by NRA."

In a Labor Day address here he said this had been done "at the expense of the all-important need for putting men and women to work creating the needs society requires and supplying the purchasing power which will start up business." He hailed the end of dealing with labor as a commodity, "bought and paid for as in the case of electric power."

"The National Recovery Act recognizes the principle that labor has status in industry," said Green. "This is a revolutionary idea for some of our largest industrial and financial corporations, which have regarded their employes attached to their pay rolls not as an essential part of the industry, but as labor power or service bought and paid for as in the case of electric power."

Now, Green said, "organized workers participate in code making through the Labor Advisory Board; * * * by presentation of arguments, data and proposals in code hearings, and by a labor advisor who participates in the conferences preceding and following the public hearing. Labor also asks representation on the code authority."

Asks Shorter Hours.

Shorter hours to take up the employment slack resulting both from the depression and from increased use of machines, higher wages to increase mass purchasing power, and universal unionization of labor were recommended by Green as means of restoring and keeping prosperity.

The company union, he said, must go. "Even though it must be obvious to any disinterested person that one of its own agents can not bargain collectively with the management, there are those high in the administration of the National Recovery Administration who would include company unions among the agencies for collective bargaining," Green explained. "This is a problem that we must solve as we improve our operation of the revocery act."

"Labor," said Green, is a "producing partner in industry, supplying the creative work necessary for production of goods and services conforming to standards upon which the firm's good will rests."

Equities to Be Defined.

"Labor actively fabricates and creates—which formerly was the basis of all ownership. We have yet to develop equities arising out of creation on a wage-earner basis but there are equities in the job, equities in employer-employee relationship which we may define in the new era to which the National recovery act will lead.

"Although the National recovery act was formulated nominally as a recovery measure, it is essentially a way toward reconstruction and industrial control. Guidance of this economic control should be entrusted to a social planning council which should accumulate records showing the effect of various policies on human welfare, discovering the backward areas and developing plans for the advancement of all groups in balanced progress.

"Experience under the National recovery act should be utilized to develop plans for greater progress. It is obvious that the immediate problem is to provide more jobs and a decent income for all normally attached to an industry. When incomes are provided for the whole of industry, machines will whirl busily."

Va. Dry Seeks Senate Seat

Prohibition Party Picks Alexandria Man as Sole Candidate.

Richmond, Sept. 3 (Spl.).—Maj. Newman H. Raymond, of Alexandria, this afternoon was nominated for the United States Senate by the executive committee of the Prohibition Party of Virginia, in session here.

He will oppose Senator Harry Flood Byrd, Democrat, and L. C. Page, of Norfolk, Republican.

A. J. Dunning, jr., of Norfolk, chairman of the executive committee, said the party will place no other candidates in the field.

Plans were being considered by the committee for financing and organizing the party throughout Virginia, as a result of "the increased orgy of drinking and the automobile accidents since repeal," as well as the party's reaction to the new deal.

Corkran, Ice Cream Manufacturer, Dies

Cambridge Man Is Stricken While in Automobile.

Cambridge, Md., Sept. 3 (Spl.).—Charles R. Corkran, 53, Eastern Shore ice cream manufacturer, died this morning in his automobile, near Berlin, while returning from Ocean City.

With him was his wife, who was driving the car. Mr. Corkran passed a remark about the weather, then slumped in the seat, dead. He was taken to a doctor at Berlin, who said that death was from heart disease.

Besides his widow, Mr. Corkran is survived by two sisters, Miss Jennie Corkran and Mrs. Harry Baker, both of Cambridge. He was an honorary member of the Rescue Fire Company.

Funeral services will be held Wednesday at 3 p. m. in St. Paul's Methodist Protestant Church.

Canning Starts Soon For Virginia Needy

Richmond, Sept. 3 (Spl.).—The Forbes meat packing plant, which was recently taken over by the Virginia Emergency Relief Administration, will be ready to can beef for needy Virginians between September 15 and October 1, Sidney T. Adair, assistant VERA administrator, said today.

"The plant will be able to can more beef than will be needed in Virginia," Mr. Adair said. "It is very probable some of the beef will be shipped to other States."

Child, 9, Bound In Wheat Bundle, Escapes Injuries

Chalons sur Marne, France, Sept. 3 (AP).—Nine-year-old Henri Guyot passed through the flying machinery of a wheat binder, came out neatly bound in a bundle, and today is telling about his strange adventure.

The boy was frightened but unscratched.

He fell before the reaper and was swallowed up by the machine. His father, expecting to find him dead or badly injured, discovered the youngster unharmed.

Rum Smugglers Active, Customs Officials Say

Chicago, Sept. 3 (AP).—Repeal has not stopped liquor smuggling, delegates attending the eighth annual convention of the National Customs Service Association said here today.

Means of drying up the dwindling trickle of contraband liquor from Canada and Mexico were chief subjects of discussion by the delegates from major ports and customs offices in the country.

Normal Schools See Enrollment Gain

Slight Increase Expected at Virginia Colleges.

Richmond, Sept. 3 (Spl.).—Reports indicate that there will be slightly increased enrollment at the State Teachers Colleges of Virginia next session, Dr. Sidney B. Hall, State superintendent of public instruction, said today.

Dr. Hall said reports from Dr. M. L. Combs, president of the college at Fredericksburg, and from Dr. S. P. Duke, president of the Harrisonburg institution, indicated an increase in enrollment, while reports from Dr. J. P. McConnell at Radford, and Dr. J. L. Jarman at Farmville, were that enrollment would be about the same as last year.

French Hunters Hunt in Vain As Sir Dragon Hides Himself

St. Gaudens, France, Sept. 3 (AP).—The dragon of Lake Camon, which opened the local hunting season with a bang, apparently had been scared off today by the bangs of shotguns fired at inoffensive rabbits and partridges.

Hunters who flocked into the region were amazed by their inability to catch a glimpse of the beast reported by M. F. Narud, for the local hunter and originator of the report described his find as 25 feet long and possessed of searchlight eyes.

Such a quadruped, it was generally admitted, would have difficulties in hiding in a sufficiently camouflaged lair to avoid the intrepid search of the hundreds of hunters armed with fowling pieces who prowled the countryside.

Their bravery in the search was all the more remarkable because of the fact that M. Narud had described the varmint as well insulated with thick scales such as those which repeatedly bent the lances of the finest knights who once roamed this territory in search of gallant adventure.

Not all the local inhabitants were enthusiastic about their dragon, for southern France long has been sensitive over the fact Alphonse Daudet in his "Prodigious Adventures of Tartarin de Tarascon" made the remarkable Tartarin a native of their region. And some of Tartarin's tales would have made the Baron Munchausen just a bit envious.

There also was the slightly foolish thought that this search for a dragon in rabbit country was not without its parallel in Tartarin de Tarascón's adventures. Daudet has his hero, hunting big game in Africa, fire at a jack rabbit and kill a blind lion.

League Urges Nations Form Trade Groups

Would Be Powerful Factor for Recovery, Committee Says.

Geneva, Sept. 3 (AP).—The League of Nations Economic Committee, which is made up of well-known economists, suggested today to the league council that the organization of economic groups in international relations was "destined to form a powerful factor in the restoration and recovery of world economy." Such an organization, the committee pointed out, was for production and sale of goods on the home market as well as internationally.

The committee said in its report that it was convinced that a type of mechanism now was ready which would produce an equitable adjustment of commercial relations when circumstances would permit utilizing it with maximum results. It said that the necessary preparation was the elmination of monetary instability and the lack of equilibrium in prices.

The report said all countries, including the United States and Great Britain, desired conclude tariff and commercial treaties and that "the upward trend of international trade which must inevitably follow will undoubtedly facilitate the return of the unconditional and unlimited most-favored-nation clause." Such a clause, the committee insisted, is a guarantee in the favor of the exports of each state.

The economic committee attacked the present currency disorders as a fundamental disturbing element to existing international economic relations. It said the depreciation of the British pound and the United States dollar "created an instability of prices which is extremely prejudicial to trade."

As an example of the formation of economic groups, the report referred to a group being formed with United States and Latin-American countries as participants.

"The United States," said the report, "is among the best customers of Latin America where it purchases large quantities of raw material and has invested much capital. The Latin-American countries, which are constantly developing, are becoming increasingly capable of absorbing the manufactured products of the United States."

'Balanced Life' Is Roper's Plea

Roosevelt Program Seeks Equitable Division of Profits, He Says.

Birmingham, Ala., Sept. 3 (AP).—Speaking on "The Balanced Life," Secretary of Commerce Daniel C. Roper today told a Labor Day audience here that the object of the Roosevelt program "is simply to secure and maintain a balance in profits for all who participate in making those profits possible."

"All thinking people admit frankly that neither the farmer nor the laborer has heretofore shared equitably in many cases in the rewards from our economic processes," he said.

His address, given under the auspices of the Central Park Methodist Church here, followed a monster Labor Day parade through the business area.

"An unbiased survey of the vast field of events and problems of today will justify the conclusion that the purpose sought through our National endeavors is a 'balanced life'—a life both for the Nation and the individual, balanced as to rights and responsibilities, as to privileges and duties, as to opportunities and contributions," the Secretary declared.

Chicago, Sept. 3 (AP).—Two robbers delivered a wounded confederate to the door of the North Avenue Hospital today, forced a doctor and two attendants to carry him in and then sped away in their car. The wounded robber, Howard Allen, 16, died an hour later.

His body had been torn with buckshot in an attempted robbery of a restaurant.

Swanky Club, Closed, May House Transients

Milwaukee, Sept. 3 (AP).—The Club Juneau, a swanky night spot, closed on the protest of residents of the exclusive Lake Shore neighborhood in which it is situated, may become the home of transient FERA workers—beds $1 a week.

Edward Logan, to whom the property has been something of a liability since the closure, announced today that "in the interest of public welfare" he plans to turn the club into "Juneau Haven."

Rain Stampedes Drought Cattle.

Fort Worth, Tex., Sept. 3 (AP).—Two hundred and fifty Government drought cattle at the stock yards here stampeded when rain fell today. They broke down a wire fence but most of them were quickly rounded up.

Radio Waves and Ripples

By George M. Adams, Jr.

DESTINED for the most successful year of his career and scheduled to take up a new radio contract within a few days, Russ Columbo, born Ruggerio Eugenio de Rudolpho Columbo, is today remembered and mourned as one of radio's unofficial "Big Three" of the crooning industry.

With Vallee and Bing Crosby, whose voice his resembled, Columbo captivated millions of listeners, allegedly feminine, to the point of hero worship. Envious males, whose voices stood a poor chance of causing domestic heart trouble, looked on with derision until "crooners" became a slandered race.

Sardonically enough, the death of the Italian orchestra leader fits the very fate often threatened for smooth-voiced radio singers by clever gag writers whose jibes drew laughs at the expense of singers like poor Russ.

Leaving radio three years ago to seek film fame, Russ wrote glowing accounts of how well he was getting on while he was trying desperately to get that initial "break." He told, it seems, about important offers he was getting, about National hook-ups he practically had cinched . . . the letters being written on stationery of some of Gotham's swankiest hotels.

But the letterheads and envelopes were "borrowed," he later admitted. And he stayed at cheap hotels . . . dreaming, thinking of his past radio fame . . . writing!

FRED WEBER, vice president of ABS in charge of station relations, is out scouring the field of independent broadcasting stations for possible additions westward to radio's newest network.

"He has an awful job on his hands," commented Leroy Mark, owner of WOL, yesterday, "but we're still contemplating and working on what we started before. Weber is going at it in a business-like and mouth-shut sort of way . . . but it's coming . . . ABS will have a Western chain."

Two inquiries, requesting details on programs that ABS can offer, have come in here . . . which, according to Mark, means that they're "negotiating." But it seems there's plenty of difficulty ahead with practically every large city on other hook-ups.

DON'TS to broadcasters issued by Burt McMurtrie, new director of A. B. S., include the following:

"Don't smoke in the studios. Don't worry. Don't change your natural style. Don't fail to rehearse your show. Don't touch the microphone. Don't ad lib. Don't drink liquor, beer, milk or sour drinks before going on the air. Don't eat ice cream or a heavy meal within an hour of your broadcast. Don't go on the air if you don't live up to these dont's."

We've observed violations of practically all of these, save perhaps the liquor clause, among broadcasters in local studios.

Ripples.

After considerable dickering, Bing Crosby and Dick Arlen yesterday settled the rules governing their short-wave radio tuning contest . . . a system of points, 25 for logging the Byrd station, one point for stations one to two thousand miles, two points for stations 3,000 miles away, and so on . . . deviation from the rules "docks" the contestant 100 points . . . Jerome Damonte, accordion soloist, who was heard last night at 9 o'clock from WOL, can be seen and heard today and tomorrow from 2 to 4 p. m. at Kitt's musical emporium, 1330 G street . . . Ann Gillis, WJSV's royal straight flush publicity queen, is enjoying balmy mountain air . . . "I expect within my own lifetime some brilliant woman will make her way from the ballot box to the Presidency," remarked a Chicago woman recently. Mrs. Roosevelt, heeding this, today will discuss the qualifications a woman Chief Executive must have, at 8:30 p. m., on WMAL . . . "Lazy" Bill Huggins, Washington's own, joins Enoch Light's orchestra as a featured vocalist tonight at 11:30 on WJSV . . . a description of the first airplane flight of the spring in Little America will be relayed from the Byrd expedition tomorrow night at 9 o'clock.

Hospital Control Change Advocated

Charleston, W. Va., Sept. 3 (Spl.). Legislation to provide medical supervision over the State hospitals dealing with mental cases in particular will be asked of the 1935 Legislature, which meets in January, according to Dr. Roy Ben Miller, of Parkersburg, president of the West Virginia Medical Association.

Dr. Miller says the State medical association favors a competent medical board, somewhat similar to the board of governors of West Virginia University, with appointive powers and medical control over the institutions.

While improvement in most of the State hospitals has been shown since an effort on the part of the medical association to remedy conditions was started in 1932, yet such, he says, can never be of a permanent nature until the entire system of control and management is changed.

G. O. P. League Has Picnic.

Keyser, W. Va., Sept. 3 (Spl.).—An all-day picnic was held today at Burlington Beach under the auspices of the Young Republican League of Mineral County.

Addresses were made by Herbert Hannis, Martinsburg, nominee for Congress in the Second District; E. Bunker Reynolds, this place, candidate for reelection as State Senator, and John I. Rogers, candidate for House of Delegates.

Friend Reveals DouglasFought New Spending

Says Budget Chief Quit Rather Than Aid Vast Relief Program.

(Associated Press.)

The resignation of Lewis W. Douglas as budget director was reported yesterday to have been due to the Administration's plan to ask the next Congress for additional large sums for relief and other purposes, which Douglas considers unjustified.

Declining to be quoted, a friend of Douglas said it had been an open secret around the Treasury and among members of Congress that Douglas did not approve of the President's financial program. Douglas, he explained, felt he could not adjust his principles and policies of government to those of the Chief Executive and that it would be better for all concerned that he step aside to allow the President to pick a man who could work in harmony with him.

Roosevelt Reported Surprised.

It was stressed, however, that Douglas maintained his high personal regard for Mr. Roosevelt and had offered to help his successor in any way he could. Although it was known that Douglas was not in accord with certain financial plans, it was said that his resignation came as a surprise to Mr. Roosevelt. It was intimated that Mr. Roosevelt asked Douglas to remain in office until after the November elections.

However, because the drafting of the budget gets under way this month, Douglas was said to feel that he could not go along and prepare a budget he could not conscientiously advocate.

Last year Douglas fixed a maximum budget figure of $2,500,000,000 on ordinary operating expenses of the Government. When the budget was sent to Congress by the President, it had been increased by many millions and billions were requested for unemployment and other relief purposes.

Wanted to Quit Then.

At that time douglas considered resigning and there were some published reports to that effect. Because of his personal devotion to the President and his desire to aid his party and the Government, however, he yielded to urgings of his friends to stay in office.

At that time Douglas told friends that "to balance the budget is my job and I am going to do it or get out."

Meanwhile, there were reports that Joseph W. Byrns, of Tennessee, former chairman of the House Appropriations Committee that initiates all the supply bills, may be offered the post after the November elections. Bryns, however, is a candidate for the Speakership and his friends believe he would not be inclined to accept. At present Bryns is Democratic floor leader and chairman of the Congressional Campaign Committee.

Meantime, Daniel W. Bell, has been named acting budget director and is undertaking the work of preparing the next budget. Hearings on department estimates are to be held this month.

Steel Trust Faces Grilling on Arms

"Zaharoff file" in the records of some American firms under scrutiny offers an intriguing twist to the inquiry, it was authoritatively learned.

Only first comers among the Capital's curious, who succeed in packing their way into the Senate Office Building's caucus room, will witness the opening show.

It was in this same setting the stock market's mighty a few months ago passed in steady procession before the Senate Banking Committee, and J. P. Morgan jiggled a midget on his knee.

Chairman Nye flatly turned thumbs down on requests of radio companies to broadcast the munitions proceedings, it was learned last night. Objections entered by some of the witnesses were held responsible for the refusal.

But amplifiers have been set up to carry the words of witnesses to every corner of the room. Acoustics of the chamber are not of the best.

Opening hearings this morning with President Carse, of the Electric Boat Co., the committee will hear other officials of the concern today and tomorrow, passing later this week to President L. L. Driggs, of the Driggs Ordnance & Engineering Co., and President A. J. Miranda, jr., of the American Armament Corporation.

The committee expects to trace correspondence to Zaharoff not only through the Electric Boat Co., successful bidders for submarine contracts in the Navy's latest construction program, but to show the titled arms salesman had relations as well with other American firms, Chairman Nye said.

Following conferences yesterday with Chief Investigator Stephen Rausenbush, and his assistant, Robert Wohlforth, Nye promised "startling' disclosures.

"I would call them sensational," he smiled, "but you might call me prejudiced."

The North Dakotan at that time announced himself in favor of some form of Government munitions "monopoly," on the basis of evidence already examined.

Other Senators interested in the disclosures pointed out that the term "munitions" covers a broad field of interrelated industries that might make a Federal "monopoly," as such, unfeasible.

One Senator, Homer T. Bone (Democrat), Washington, predicted Government regulation of domestic arms makers might result from the inquiry.

Attacking the inquiry at the outset from its international implications, Senator Nye said he expected to pursue this tangent. He expects to expose a part played by armament men in the Chaco hostilities of Paraguay and Bolivia, during the third week of the inquiry, he said.

Hoover Condemns New Deal As Usurping Human Liberties

where the obligation to promote the common welfare was mandatory and could be made effective; wherein was embodied in its very framework the denial of the right of the Government itself or of any group, any business, or any class to infringe upon inalienable rights; wherein the majority was to rule; wherein Government was to be 'of laws and not of men;' whereby the individual was guaranteed the just protection of these rights by its tribunals—the structure of American democracy.

Greed Peril to Liberty.

"Out of these ideals, under this philosophy, and through this structure we have developed the principles and forms of our social, economic and governmental life—the American system.

"The rise of our race under it marks the high tide of a thousand years of human struggle. Under it our country has grown to greatness and led the world in the emancipation of men. When these boundaries of liberty are overstepped, America will cease to be American.

"Our system has at all times had to contend with internal encroachments upon liberty. Greed in economic agencies invades it from the right, and greed for power in bureaucracy and government infringes it from the left.

"I should be glad indeed to find a short cut to end the struggle with the immensities of human problems. I have no word of criticism, but rather a great sympathy with those who honestly search human experience and human thought for some new way out, where freedom requires no safeguards, where justice requires no striving, where bread comes without competition and with little sweat.

Urgent Issues Created.

"Such dreams are not without value, and one could join in them with satisfaction but for the mind troubled with recollection of human frailty, and but for the woeful confirmations which the world has given of the failure of idealism alone, without the compass of experience.

"It is now claimed by large and vocal groups, both in and out of government, that liberty has failed, that emergency encroachments upon its principles should be made permanent. Thereby are created the most urgent issues. First, whether we must submit to some other system by which the fundamentals of liberty are sacrificed, and, second, whether, even if we make these sacrifices, we shall not defeat the hope and progress of humanity.

"It is my hope to show that to resume the path of liberty is not to go backward; it is to return to the path of progress from following the will-o'-the-wisps which lead either to the swamps of primitive greed or to political tyranny.

Casualty to Liberty.

"The origins, character and affinities of the regimentation theory of economics and government, its impacts upon true American liberalism, and its departures from it can best be determined by an examination of the actions taken and the measures adopted in the United States during recent months.

"The first step of economic regimentation is a vast centralization of power in the executive. Powers once delegated are bound to be used, for one step drives to another.

"The whole thesis behind this program is the very theory that man is but the pawn of the state. It is a usurpation of the primary liberties of man by government. It is a vast shift from the American concept of human rights, which even the Government may not infringe, to those social philosophies where men are wholly subjective of the state. It is a vast casualty to liberty if it shall be continued."

Doug Davis Killed In Air Race Crash

race, an open event of 100 miles over a triangular 8½ mile course. This meant 36 steep banks around the pylons at terrific speed.

First accounts of the accident differed. One report was that Davis, after covering eight of his 12 laps, had cut in front of the back checkerboard tower. This account said the plyon referee had flagged him to repeat the turn, and that in banking, Davis lost control of his ship.

Another report said that as Davis flashed around the pylon, he realized he was cutting too close to it, and had tried to pull his plane into the air. The racer nosed up, and then spun to the ground an eighth of a mile from the pylon.

The Georgian was dead in the plane's cockpit when rescuers arrived. The crash occurred in the rear of the grandstand, and spectators were unaware of it until informed by an announcer. Then there was a rush to the scene. Police were forced to beat off souvenir hunters, knocking one man unconscious before the pilot could be removed from the wreckage.

Col. Turner, who addressed the crowd after being awarded the Thompson trophy and $2,250, said he saw the crash and for a moment considered stopping. Then, he said, he decided that in a race, risks were part of the game, and that he and the others were obliged to continue as though nothing had happened.

Land Plane Record Beaten.

Only two hours before the crash, Davis had exceeded the world's record for land planes in a time trial. On four laps, he averaged 306.215 miles an hour, but he set no official record because the National Aeronautic Association requires a margin of 4.97 miles an hour. The present record is 304.98 miles an hour, set last year at Chicago by the late Jimmy Wedell.

Davis, who seemed an almost certain winner of the Thompson race, also won the Bendix Transcontinetal Derby last Friday, beating two other contestants in a flight from Los Angeles to Cleveland. He won the Thompson race in 1929.

Col. Turner Saturday broke the record for a West-East flight from Los Angeles to New York by 2 minutes, at 10 hours 2 minutes and 51 seconds.

Roy T. Minor, of Hollywood, Calif., finished second in the Thompson race with a speed of 214.979 miles an hour. He received $1,250. J. A. Worthen, of New Orleans, was third; Harold Neuman, of Moline, Ill., fourth, and Roger Don Rae, of Lansing, Mich., fifth. Lee Miles, formerly the personal pilot for Ann Harding, dropped out.

Davis Dated by Line As Most Valued Pilot

Apprised of Douglas Davis' death in Cleveland, Eastern Air Transport officials said he had been one of their best known and most valued pilots.

Davis was a pilot for E. A. T. for the last three years and flew the route while running out of Atlanta to Miami and also to New Orleans. He was married and the father of one child, a boy. He made his home in Atlanta.

In the World War Davis served in the Army Air Corps.

British Labor Leader Pleads for United Front

Weymouth, England, Sept. 3 (AP).—Andrew Conley, in his presidential address before the annual British Trades Union Congress today, pleaded for a united world front of labor and urged that the American Federation of Labor join the International Federation of Trades Unions.

The British labor chief praised the likelihood that Soviet Russia would enter the League of Nations and said he hoped the United States would do likewise.

Old Wooden Freighter Hits Reef, Abandoned

Del Monte, Calif., Sept. 3 (AP).—The old wooden freighter J. B. Stetson was being pounded to pieces tonight in the surf off Cypress Point, 3 miles south of the harbor entrance of Monterey, her destination.

The ship, of 521 net tons, laden with timber, lost her bearings in heavy fog early today and crashed on a reef. Coast Guard men on the cutter Daphine removed Capt. Carl Hurner and his crew of 20.

Mrs. Roosevelt Names 59 Aids In Social Work

Noted Women Summoned in 1934 Mobilization for Human Needs.

Hyde Park, Sept. 3 (AP).—Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt today named 59 women as members of the National women's committee of the 1934 mobilization for human needs, of which she is chairman.

Mrs. Frederic M. Paist, Wayne, Pa.; Miss Jane Addams, Chicago; Mrs. August Belmont, New York City; Mrs. Marcus C. Sloss, San Francisco, and Miss Ida M. Tarbell, New York City, are named vice chairmen. Mrs. Paist will serve as executive vice chairman.

Ten acknowledged leaders in social service, 14 presidents of large women's organizations, 30 State leaders and others to be named shortly will comprise the membership under whose direction women's crusaders will be organized.

Mrs. Roosevelt and Newton D. Baker, chairman of the 1934 mobilization, selected the members for their continued interest in social work and problems.

Last year under Mrs. Roosevelt's leadership, 255 communities in 40 States conducted crusades to determine the needs of American communities and report them to Community Chests and other federated social efforts.

Mrs. Roosevelt said:

"The achievement of the crusades last fall passed our anticipations. The enthusiastic and prompt response of women to our plea for assistance this fall encourages us in the belief that out of the present mobilizations will come a better understanding of the welfare services of American communities and a more generous response to these services."

Members of the National women's committee include Miss Mabel T. Boardman, Miss Katherine Lenroot, Miss Frances Perkins, Mrs. Mary Roberts Rinehart and Mrs. Charles Cary Rumsey, all of Washington, D. C.; Mrs. Sidney Borg, Commander Evangeline Booth, Mrs. John M. Glenn and Miss Lillian D. Wald, all of New York.

Mrs. Newton D. Baker, Cleveland; Mrs. Dwight Whitney Morrow, Englewood, N. J.; Dr. Aurelia Reinhardt, Oakland, Calif.; Mrs. Lessing Rosenwald, Philadelphia; Mrs. Thomas A. Edison, Llewellyn Park, N. J.; Mrs. Geline MacDonald Bowman, Richmond, Va.; Mrs. Arthur Brin, Minneapolis, Minn.; Mrs. James T. Ferguson, Kansas City; Miss Amelia Grant, New York; Dr. Mary E. Woolley, South Hadley, Mass.

Miss Anna Sarachon Hooley, Washington, D. C.; Mrs. Grace Morrison Poole, Washington, D. C.; Miss Elizabeth Taylor, Little Rock, Ark.; Miss Rose Schneiderman, Washington, D. C., and Mrs. Lida Foote Tarr, Cleveland.

As finally set up, the committee will have a State leader for each of the 48 States. Mrs. Granville Gray Valentine, of Richmond, was named State leader for Virginia.

next July, but will further tighten up on loopholes in the income tax provisions.

While the $370,000,000 act passed last spring plugged many avenues through which some big financiers have evaded payments, it was not considered perfect. Besides seeking to perfect that measure, Doughton said it was planned to give the whole tax structure an overhauling that will insure a steady flow of income for the Treasury.

Because of the short time the new act has been on the statute books, its revenue propensities have yet to be determined. Indications are the capital stock and excess profits taxes will bring in substantial returns.

However, experts claim it will not be sufficient to take care of the levies lapsing next July. One of the miscellaneous imports, that on bank checks, which returned $41,000,000 in the last fiscal year, terminates January 1, 1935.

Of the numerous levies ended July 1, the 1 cent a gallon tax on gasoline is the biggest producer, having yielded $202,000,000 in the last fiscal year. Unless continued by Congress, this tax and those on lubricating oils, electrical energy, automobiles and parts, communications systems, admissions, among many others go off the books at the end of the present fiscal year.

and American salesmen are now on the island gathering orders that were postponed so Cuban importers could take advantage of the new and lowered duties.

Since the passage of the trade agreements act in June, the State Department has been busy with organiztion of the tariff sections set up and commodity studies involving every product which will enter into the proposed negotiations. Under the supervision of Assistant Secretary Francis B. Sayre, 16 committees of 26 tariff and treaty experts have been making the preliminry studies necessary for agreements with 12 countries.

Specialists Speed Task.

The State Department's permanent set-up includes divisions which specialize in all questions relating to different geographical sectors in order to speed the gigantic task ahead of them. Henry C. Grady, chief of the tariffs section, has planned negotiations to utilize the experts in three different geographical sectors. In order to speed the gigantic task ahead of them, Henry C. Grady, chief of the tariffs section, has planned negotiations to utilize the experts in three different divisions in the immediate future.

Trade experts in the Latin American division, under the supervision of Assistant Secretary Sumner Welles, who negotiated the Cuban pact, already are at work on the proposed Brazilian and Haitian agreements. They will do the negotiating with other Latin American nations to be named.

At the same time experts from the eastern European division, headed by Robert F. Kelley, and the western European division, headed by J. Pierpont Hoffatt, will negotiate with the European countries to be included in the first negotiations.

By October, negotiations are expected to be in progress with from eight to ten nations.

Movies and Rain Halt Garner's Hunting Trip

Uvalde, Tex., Sept. 3 (AP). — First the movies, and now rain, have prevented Vice President John Nance Garner from going dove hunting.

A hunting trip planned for Sunday "exploded" when Mr. Garner's 12-year-old granddaughter, Genevieve Garner, dropped a casual remark that she would like to see a picture. The hunting trip was postponed. Today a heavy rain fell and the Vice President spent his time reading.

Business on Upgrade, Says Head of Mint

Cheyenne, Wyo., Sept. 3 (AP).—Nellie Tayloe Ross, director of the United States Mint, said today demand by private business for silver coins is greater during the last year than in the ten preceding years combined, shows America is whipping the depression.

"I have been interested in going over the figures of the mint," Mrs. Ross said, "and it is satisfying to note that in past generations the mint quickly points to a resumption of business activity just as it does now."

Girl Abduction Report Probed

Witnesses Tell Alexandria Police Victim Was Thrown Into Car.

An apparent abduction of a girl, about 12 years old, who was thrown into an automobile on Alfred street, Alexandria, over her screaming protests, last night started an investigation by Capt. John S. Arnold, of the Alexandria police. No reports of a missing girl had been made to authorities last night.

Mrs. Joseph P. Crockett, 819 Prince street, told police that she heard screams from a passing car. A few moments later other neighbors reported the same incident. Capt. Arnold, who lives nearby, heard the cries of the girl.

A woman and two colored boys told Capt. Arnold that the girl was crossing Alfred street and stopped while a car was passing. A man leaped from the automobile, they said, and threw the girl into the machine and sped away. All of the witnesses agreed that the car was a light coupe, but none could describe the men.

18,000 Watch Horse Events At Warrenton

Toss of Coin Decides International Course Class Victor.

By C. B. Carr.

Warrenton, Va., Sept. 3.—A holiday crowd of 18,000 today watched a score of the leading hunter stables of the East vie in the opening classes of the Warrenton Horse Show.

Heavy going and often a blinding rain reduced the quality of the performance in some classes, but the spirit of competition was intensive from the opening event until an almost hopeless tie developed in the final, the international class. Several spills occurred, none serious.

Mrs. John Hay Whitney, mistress of the Llangolen Stables, Upperville, Va., was outstanding in the hunter jumping classes, her Two Leggins carrying off honors in the lightweight hunters and Kinprillis winning in the middle and heavyweight hunters.

In the strictly show ring classes for the younger members of the hunter world, E. L. Redmon, of Middleburg, annexed both the half-bred foals with Holly and the half-bred yearlings with Silverlock. The stables of L. R. Colbert, Fredericksburg, was outstanding in the pony class, winning the saddle class with Little Liza Jane and the ponies over fences event with Silver Queen.

Cliftons Beau Scores.

One of the coveted classes, the Warrenton Hunt Trophy, with a $75 piece of silver plate to the winner, was won by Cliftons Beau, owned by Dr. Lewis M. Allen, of Winchester, recently adjudged champion of the Berryville Horse Show.

The international course class drew rounds of applause as Ray S. Shoemaker's Ganadora and Mr. and Mrs. N. Thomas Mosby's Rose Gold were ridden over the jumps 40 times in an effort to break a tie for the first place. Finally, Mr. Shoemaker offered to accept the toss of a coin. The toss, made by Frank D. Gaskins, manager of the show, was won by Mrs. Mosby.

A half dozen other hunter stables shared in the day's honors. A chestnut colt, owned by Manley W. Virginia Labor Marks Holiday Despite Storm

Mrs. Pinchot's Speech Is Read as Plane Fails to Make Flight.

(Associated Press.)

Rain marred Labor Day celebrations at most Virginia points yesterday, but holiday crowds turned to indoor activities as substitutes of racing, parades and other traditional features of the day. The weather forced postponement of automobile racing at Richmond and prevented Mrs. Gifford Pinchot, wife of the Governor of Pennsylvania, from speaking at a labor rally at Buckroe Beach.

Intending to fly to Langley Field, she was landbound by poor flying weather. Her speech was read by E. J. Shave, secretary of the Virginia Federation of Labor.

At Roanoke, one of the few spots where the weather was fair, 3,000 union members staged the first Labor Day parade in recent years.

Hardy sailors braved whitecaps in the lower James River and officials attempted to stage the annual Newport News regatta. Some boats withdrew, but others sailed in a series of races.

At Petersburg Woodmen of the World and members of the State Letter Carries Association were in convention. Outings planned for the evening were canceled.

The American Legion convention in Lynchburg, which has filled that city with Virginia legionnaires and their wives, went through its first formal session in City Armory yesterday. A parade is scheduled today.

Danville, Virginia's center of the cotton textile industry, was quiet, as workers ignored the general strike call and reported for work at the Riverside and Dan River cotton mills yesterday morning.

Virginia Beach resorts shivered in a cold wind which brought disappointing weather to wind up the season.

Banks throughout the State generally observed the day and all State offices at Richmond remained closed. Gov. Peery and most other State officials were out of the city.

Labor Law Revision Needed, Unions Told

Buckroe Beach, Va., Sept. 3 (AP). The changes brought by technological improvement must be recognized and dealt with "if our economic system is to endure," Mrs. Gifford Pinchot wrote in an address prepared for delivery here today.

The wife of the Governor of Pennsylvania and militant supporter of organized labor was prevented by bad weather from coming here by air. She wired her speech, however, to E. J. Shave, secretary of the Virginia Federation of Labor, who read it.

"I am not one of those who tremble at the words, 'planned society' — society always has been planned," Mrs. Pinchot said.

"It is planned, and ever increasingly so, by Wall Street; by international bankers; by railroads; by utility men. But they so shape the pattern of our economic life that it shall reap even greater profits for them, careless and indifferent to the security and welfare of the average man and woman. The question we have to decide is not whether society will be planned or not, but in whose interests the planning is to be done.

"You know and I know," Mrs. Pinchot said, "that certain legislation is necessary immediately. The minimum wage law, for instance, on a National scale, affecting all workers, would do more to end the depression than any other one thing."

Plan to Tax Peanuts Shelled

AAA Seeks Solution After Proposed Levy Is Called Menace to Size of Candy Bars and Other Names at Hearing.

(Associated Press.)

The AAA stood ready yesterday to throw the full force of its vast powers behind efforts to restore peanuts, basic agricultural commodity, to their rightful place in the farm sun.

Economists and lawyers of the Administration were studying a transcript of hearings held on a plan to levy a processing tax on peanuts and make benefit payments to growers.

But opposing factions at the hearing introduced the question of what constituted first processing of peanuts, the point at which the tax would be levied—roasting, shucking, skinning, or chewing?

Others contended that no tax should be levied since it would inevitably force the public to change its between-meals habits. Arguments that it would shift consumption to other nuts, fruits, and confections—including apple butter—were heard. Still others expressed the belief that it would cut the size of peanut bars and reduce the number of nuts per piece of candy.

Just how the processing tax would be passed on to consumers was another moot question. Manufacturers and retailers confessed the prospective difficulty of splitting the possible tax of a few cents per pound by bag or by nut.

The possibility of excepting from the tax that portion of the domestically consumed product diverted to circus elephants and peanut-rolling contests may be brought into the discussion, officials said.

Secretary Wallace was silent on the problem until such time as it may be brought up for final decision.

Family's Record in Teaching Profession Totals 100 Years

Middleburg, W. Va., Sept. 3 (Spl.).—B. F. Montgomery, of Tyler County, and members of his family have taught school an even 100 years, establishing what is believed to be a record in educational circles in West Virginia.

The head of the family taught continuously from 1898 until last year, when he retired at the age of 58 years. Clyde R. Montgomery has taught 14 years; Mrs. Clyde R. Montgomery, 1; Carl F. Montgomery, 14; Mrs. C. F. Montgomery, 12; Leslie Montgomery, 6; Mildred Montgomery Ash, 7; Nelson Montgomery, 5, and Mrs. Nelson Montgomery, 3 years.

Members of this teaching family have spent 40 years in high schools, 26 in colleges and 88 in graded schools to equip themselves for their work.

All members of the family, except the mother and one son, too young to teach, have been teachers. The wives of all sons who are married are school teachers, and one year ten members of the family were employed as school teachers.

Annapolis, Md., Sept. 3 (Spl.).—Sporadic showers of rain and generally unseasonable weather dampened the hopes of hundreds of Labor Day celebrants in and around Annapolis.

No parade or other formal demonstration was scheduled. The various resorts and inns failed to be patronized by holiday crowds.

As usual it was getaway time for vacationists at the many shore resorts, and cottages that had been open since early summer, were closed and families trekked back to city homes.

Banks and all public offices remained closed and there was an almost complete cessation of business.

Lonaconing, Md., Sept. 3 (Spl.). The Labor Day celebration of the United Mine Workers of the Georges Creek territory drew several thousand visitors to Lonaconing today.

The parade was made up of United Mine Workers locals from Mount Savage, Zihlman, Bloomington, Westernport, Barton, Eckhart, Hoffman, Borden Shaft, Midlothian, Klondike, Midland and Lonaconing. Other union organizations in line were the recently formed rubber workers of Cumberland and the Mount Savage clay miners and brick workers.

Former County Road Director Benjamin H. Evans was chief marshal.

The parade disbanded at Athletic Park where speaking and other exercises were held. The addresses were delivered by Representative David J. Lewis and Robert B. Kimble, Cumberland, member of the Maryland House of Delegates and former president of the Maryland State and District of Columbia Federation of Labor.

Kent, on Trial, Denies Slaying Mrs. Hastings

Two Witnesses Questioned at First Day's Session in Fincastle Court.

Fincastle, Va., Sept. 3 (AP).—The Commonwealth informed a jury of 12 today it expected to prove that Maj. Robert C. Kent, on trial here for murder, "kidnaped" Mrs. Mary J. Hastings, Blue Ridge Springs hotel operator, with intent "to extort money, or pecuniary benefit, or both."

The jury was chosen late this afternoon, after Kent had pleaded "not guilty."

Only two witnesses were heard before court was recessed until 9 a. m. tomorrow. Harry Henson, Roanoke attorney and one of the receivers of the hotel operated by Mrs. Hastings, testified Kent had sought to buy the property.

John P. Saul, chief counsel and vice president of the Shenandoah Life Insurance Co., identified correspondence to Mrs. Hastings, copies of which he said were sent to Kent, since the latter was interested in acquiring the property.

Seven Veniremen Excused.

The panel of 20 was completed in midafternoon. Seven veniremen were excused. Two said they were policyholders in the Shenandoah Life Insurance Co., which owned the Blue Ridge Springs resort which Mrs. Hastings operated. Three told the court they had formed an opinion, and two said they objected to capital punishment.

Defense Attorney S. R. Price asserted that those opposed to capital punishment should not be struck from the list "simply because they have in them the milk of human kindness." He was overruled.

Questioning of the veniremen was delayed several hours while attorneys fought over a bill of particulars covering the State's charge against Kent who left Botetourt County on an automobile trip with Mrs. Hastings several days before her body was found near Stroudsburg, Pa. In another indictment Kent is charged with the murder of Mrs. Hastings.

Defense Overruled.

The first bill of particulars offered by the State was objected to by the defense and rejected by the court as too vague. A second one, approved over defense objections, as motives for the crime alleged that Kent owed $243 to Mrs. Hastings; that he knew she was going to receive $3,000 from some property she had in the State of Washington and that he sought to obtain a lease on the Blue Ridge Springs, Va., hotel property.

Another defense move was unsuccessful when the presiding judge, in chambers, refused a request that the venire from which the jury was to be selected should be called from another county.

Kent declined to say whether he expected to testify in his own defense.

Virginia Man Dies of Poison.

Norfolk, Va., Sept. 3 (Spl.).—Harvey W. Wilson, 26, South Norfolk, who ten days ago took several poison tablets by mistake, died yesterday at a local hospital. Wilson took the tablets thinking they were a headache remedy.

Farewell Note Found, Police Hunt Salesman

Hagerstown, Md., Sept. 3 (Spl.).—Authorities began a search today for Edwin Miller, 28, local salesman, after they had found his automobile abandoned in the southern part of Hagerstown.

They said that a note, saying good-by to his wife and child, was found among some papers in the car.

Gen. Hines Calls On Veterans to Aid President

Tells Virginia Legion New Type of Citizenship Is Needed Today.

By Charles Clark.

Lynchburg, Va., Sept. 3 (Spl.).—In a stirring address to the Virginia American Legion at its annual convention here today, Gen. Frank T. Hines, administrator of Veterans' Affairs, urged the legionnaires to drive from their communities "greed, lack of respect for the law, and selfishness in all its forms." He asked the veterans to support President Roosevelt.

Eight hundred former service men and scores of legion auxiliary members cheered noisily as Gen. Hines recounted the good work that the legion had done in behalf of its own veterans for civic advancement throughout the country.

"There is too little recognition of the duties of the citizen," he declared, "and a lack of full appreciation of his responsibilities.

"There is need for a new spirit of service and unselfishness that will predominate and so bring about the overthrow of the self-seeker and the greedy," he asserted.

"The World War has been followed both at home and abroad by a most distressing period," Gen. Hines said. "It seems to have been difficult for nations and the people to readjust themselves following that great conflict. Along with the rest of the world, the United States has had a period of industrial depression and social upheaval of such a character as to test the souls of men.

Opportunity for Legion.

"There is a great further opportunity now for the American Legion, having accomplished your first objective—the care of your disabled comrades. Your lines should be tightened now in support of your President and the Government for the purpose of establishing a higher and more American type of citizenship, and a more active loyalty to its cause. We can not afford at any time, and more especially at this time, to have any among us who are advocating principles and policies not in keeping with the fundamental principles upon which our Nation was founded and upon which it has grown and prospered."

Before a crowd of 2,000 spectators, 10 Virginia beauties were chosen tonight in the preliminaries of the beauty contest. From their number one will be chosen as "Miss Virginia" tomorrow night in the finals of the contest.

The ten chosen are Miss Marie Turnbull, Westmoreland County; Miss Blanche Lane, Surrey County; Miss Elizabeth Crabbin, Richmond; Miss Kitty Roberts, Farmville; Miss Ruby Hodges, Rocky Mount; Miss Mattie Jackson, Lynchburg; Miss Margaret Hansbrough, Winchester; Miss Barbara Shear, Loudoun county; Miss Marion Howe Unberger, Wythe county and Miss Gertrude McCosky, of Covington.

Sixty-seven contestants competed in the preliminaries, which were held indoors.

Representative C. A. Woodrum, of Roanoke, met Gen. Hines here this morning. He also addressed the convention. Gen. Hines and Mr. Woodrum left this afternoon to inspect the new Veterans' Hospital at Roanoke.

State Senator John J. Wicker, jr., of Richmond, also head of the HOLC of Virgiina and former State commander of the legion, told the convention that in the next war "money and commodities will not be considered ahead of flesh and blood."

Industry as well as manpower would be drafted, he said. Mrs. W. H. Biester, jr., president of the American Legion Auxiliary, paid tribute to the excellent leadership of National Commander Hayes and to the legion auxiliary leaders who have increased the auxiliary membership by 32,000 during the past year.

Others Also Speak.

Col. John Thomas Taylor, legislative representative in Washington; Mayor L. E. Lichford and other legion representatives made short speeches during the morning session.

For the first time in years, rain fell during the State convention. The downpour was constant from early morning and it caused the cancellation of several outdoor events.

The beauty contest eliminations

Politics played no part in the meetings today. Virginia Beach alone seeks the convention next year, and Robert L. (Bob) Insko, assistant superintendent of the Lorton (Va.) Reformatory near Washington, is almost certain to be elected the next State commander to succeed Homer K. Bowen, of Wytheville.

Tomorrow the annual parade will be staged.

Twenty-ninth Division Parades at Baltimore

Baltimore, Sept. 3 (Spl.).—Marching to the strains of martial music, thousands of veterans of the World War paraded here today in the rain as a climax to the annual convention of the Twenty-ninth Division Association.

During its service in the war, the outfit was known more familiary as the Blue and Gray Division.

A police unit, a detail from the fire department, and National Guard details also participated in the parade. Thirty-four bands and drum corps were in the line of march.

New officers of the organization, elected yesterday, reviewed the parade from a stand in front of the city hall, Mayor Jackson and other city officials, with National Guard officers and officers from the Third Army Corps Area, also in the reviewing stand.

Sample Ballot Double Winner At Horse Show

Maryland Fox Hunters' Contests at Laurel Run Off in Rain.

Sample Ballot, 5-year-old chestnut gelding, owned by Jack Allen, of Alexandria, Va., stole the show yesterday at the Maryland Foxhunters Association horse and hound show at Seven Knolls Farm near Laurel, Md. Ridden by Fred J. Hughes, jr., 16 years old, of Poolesville, Md., the horse won two first in the four events in which he was entered.

Sired by Rockminster, out of Inaugurate, the geld ran as a 2-year-old on the race tracks and recently came into the possession of Allen, who is a Washington newspaperman. This is the third show in which the horse has been entered. He won a second in the Rock Creek horse show recently.

The horse staged a clean performance in the two events in which he won, there being little doubt in the minds even of the spectators as to his victory. After two beautiful jumps in the touch and out, the horse came to grief on a high gate jump, which it had never faced before. Veteran horsemen predicted a great future for the horse when it receives a little more schooling.

Practically the entire show was run off in the rain, heavy showers occasionally forcing the spectators to the shelter of automobiles and sheds.

Mrs. R. E. L. Smith, of Linden, with her horse, Iron Heels, also came in for commendation from the crowd. Most of the spectators were regular show followers and horse lovers, as the rain kept away most of those who were not of the dyed-in-the-wool variety. Iron Heels captured a first in the open saddle class and showed well in the other classes.

An unusually excellent group of dogs was entered in the hound show. The Rolfe-Bland entries were outstanding in the show, winning four classes and places in practically every other class in which they were entered.

Judges were Thomas T. Mott, of Bethesda; M. F. H. Redland Hunt, for the horse show, and John B. Kimes, Silver Spring, for the fox-hound bench show.

High Seas Menace Ocean City's Road

Ocean City, Md., Sept. 3 (Spl.).—Heavy seas and high tide of the last two days have caused the State highway department headquarters here to keep a 24-hour shift of workers on the Ocean City causeway connecting the resort with the mainland.

The heavy tides seriously menaced that structure, though two-way traffic has been maintained through the week-end rush, according to State highway officials here.

Crushed rock and sand bags have been taken to the scene and road officials here say they will be able to keep the resort in touch with the mainland.

Sanitation Plan To Give Jobs in Fairfax County

About 25 Will Get Work Throughout Coming Winter.

FAIRFAX BUREAU OF THE POST,
P. O. Box 248, Fairfax, Va.
Phone Clarendon 126-J.

About 25 men will be given work on a county-wide sanitation project throughout the winter, it was announced yesterday by R. J. White, sanitary officer of Fairfax County, Va., who will act as local supervisor.

The project is expected to start this week and will be financed by FERA funds. It is designed to furnish certain sanitary improvements for residents of the county who are unable to pay for the work. The residents who can furnish necessary material will be provided with the labor free of charge. The work will be done under county health regulations with the sanitary inspector passing on each project.

The work this fall and winter will be done mostly in Mount Vernon, Lee and Centerville magisterial districts. In the other three districts White stated about 95 per cent of the homes already have approved sanitary arrangements.

The project is similar to the CWA project which was started last winter, but was abandoned with other CWA activities last spring. White said yesterday that only local men will be employed. The weekly time alloted to each will be governed by the number of dependents, with a maximum of 30 hours a week.

Those interested in the plan are requested by the sanitary officer to communicate with the county health office.

The proposed county ordinance regulating the feeding of garbage on commercial hog farms, which has been pending for the past several months, will not be considered tomorrow at the regular monthly meeting of the Board of Supervisors of Fairfax County, Va., according to its chairman, W. F. P. Reid.

Action on the proposed ordinance has been postponed because of the absence from the county of Commonwealth Attorney Wilson M. Farr.

All For One Or One For A. L. L.

Americans like tags. Lincoln was the Great Emancipator. Upton Sinclair has become the Great Embarrassor.

The Democratic party has been busy ever since his victory at the primaries apologizing for him. Now it is the Socialist's turn to be red in the face. The would-be governor has been disowned by Norman Thomas, who says he is no more Socialist than he is Democrat. And out in California the executive committee of the Socialist party has turned on its erstwhile friend.

The committee denies that the EPIC program is a Socialist program. The Democrats say that only a bar sinister connects it with the New Deal. Certainly Upton Sinclair will never be indorsed by Prohibitionists or Communists and the Republicans welcome him only as the man who will do their own candidate the most good—by indirection.

Thus all around nobody seems to want Mr. Sinclair's political company. It would seem, barring his election as a one-man show, as though only one course of action lies before him. That is to become a steering committee member of the non-partisan American Liberty League.

The Poet's Place.

It continues to be a vexing problem, this part that the poet should play in modern society. Should he withdraw into the special realm of poetry, or is it necessary for him to share in and reflect the perplexities of the impinging world? This has always been a problem, but seldom as much discussed as now. Poets have generally dealt with philosophy and politics as well as with beauty. Today, however, they are constantly between two worlds: one a world where they need not, as George Moore said of Shakespeare, "soil their songs with thought;" the other one where they apply their art to the vital problems of their age.

In the London Daily Telegraph, Violet Sackville-West writes that the modern poet's sense of social responsibility is already so widespread that the old phrase "pure poetry" is meaningless. She reviews two books of British verse. In each, the first part is romantic and decorative, while the second part of each reveals the poet troubled by a realization of his duty to interpret the world of today not only in poetic forms, but through propaganda.

A new magazine of verse entitled Smoke has just been issued. Through its announced "program" it adds to this discussion. "For art as mere amusement, or as something outside the activity of living, the editors of Smoke have no concern. They await the expression of important experience in suitable forms. They are unwilling to fight the battle between 'proletarian' and 'nonproletarian' art under either of these banners. It does not matter whether a poet uses the class war, the problems of the individual, or the discovery of beauty in his work." Force, rational balance, and a lively play of the emotions are what Smoke seeks. It believes that poetry is a human necessity.

The great poet has never been far away from an expression of the human emotions. Some of the greatest poetry ever written, for this reason, is essentially propaganda. But it has lived through the years because the institutions for whose endurance it was devised have been universal and lasting. The poet can not escape from the world, for everything there is to write about has some relation to humanity. The great poet is the one who does "soil his song with thought," and remembers that art is the expression of experience and can not exist "outside the activity of living."

Blood And Sand.

Perhaps an American Ambassador ought not to like bullfights—or admit to liking them. Certainly if Mr. Jefferson Caffery, American Ambassador to Cuba, says he didn't say he favored a resumption of bullfighting on that tranquil island—well, he didn't say it. But anybody conversant with the technique, the traditions and the meticulous code of the bull-ring can make out a case for the sport, even without benefit of Hemingway.

There is as much glamour in a bullfight as in a football game. There is a greater need for agility, nerve, judgment and physical perfection in the historic Spanish sport than there is in prize-fighting. And if there is a bull to be slaughtered, he would be slaughtered anyhow. If horses are occasionally killed, so they are at steeplechases. If men very rarely are gored to death, it is with full knowledge and willing acceptance of the risks they take.

There is something very smug in the Anglo-Saxon attitude toward sports of other nations. The English richly merit the story which the subtle French relate with relish: "It's a lovely day," said his lordship, "let's go out and kill something." And, concerning the issue of the degrading influence of bullfighting, one recalls the retort made by a witty Spaniard to a self-appointed American censor: "Yes, our bullfights are not altogether edifying. I suppose you would say that the military parades we have so seldom are much more civilized?"

The Day Of Labor.

A difference worth dwelling upon contrasts the parades of organized workers which took place in every sizable American community yesterday, and those which characterize a European May Day. The workers here carried in their hands American flags and marched to the tunes of patriotic songs. On the Labor Day of Europe, except where Nationalist dictatorships have barred the demonstration, the marchers carry red flags. The music which guides their steps is the Internationale.

Yet in spite of the fact that the American Federation of Labor has in this symbolic manner, and in countless more practical ways, ceaselessly demonstrated its essential conservatism and patriotism, it remains over large areas a proscribed organization. In the steel industry, the automobile industry, in large patches of the textile, bituminous coal and other vital fields of economic enterprise, trade unionism is still bitterly resented and its encroachments stubbornly fought by management. Both the steel and automobile industries have recently been reported as considering withdrawal from their codes if these operate to make trade unionism dominant.

For this attitude the tactics of American trade unionism are clearly in part to blame. Over and over again the A. F. of L. has backed unreasonable demands, has exercized its power in arbitrary manner, has revealed serious abuses of leadership, has indulged in jurisdictional and factional fights with gross disregard of community welfare. But when all the unsavory side of the record is set down, few will be found with the presumption to assert that the A. F. of L., by and large, has failed to justify itself as a vital and constructive part of modern American life.

Moreover, the failings and blunders of trade unionism have to a large extent been forced upon it by the bitterness with which its progress has been fought; the contempt with which its claims have been received by many short-sighted employers. Arrogance begets arrogance; brutality evokes brutality; ruthlessness calls forth ruthlessness. In the vicious circle of charge and countercharge which characterizes so much of current American industrial relations, it is only a partisan who will dare lay the burden of blame at a single door.

Today, however, the time for futile recriminations on the basic issue of trade unionism is at an end. Abuses of power by the unions must be restricted; whether the organization shall develop on craft or industrial lines must be decided; appreciation of the economic implications of labor demands must be brought home to the rank and file. But on the issue of the right to organize and bargain collectively there is no more room for argument. What capital regards as its own inalienable right can not longer be denied to labor. What is approved by the social conscience of the community as a whole can no longer be gainsaid by a single prejudiced element of the community.

The basic reason for the widespread industrial unrest this Labor Day just past is clearly the failure on the part of certain industries to grant the right to organize along lines more independent than those of company unionism. Probably three-fourths of the strikes of the past year have centered on that issue. Until this right is granted there will be more, not less, industrial chaos. The need for constructive policies by trade unionism is enormous. But it is impossible to expect uniformly constructive policy from organizations which have not yet been able fully to establish their right to unchallenged existence.

This Labor Day has seen the destructive rather than the constructive aspects of trade unionism in the ascendant. And that condition will continue until the trade unions are able to bargain collectively instead of being forced to prove by strike action that they are entitled to do so. In the interests of recovery it must be hoped that the year before next Labor Day will see this long overdue development.

Camp Followers Of Crime.

As a sequence to the killing of John Dillinger, Federal officers have arrested two physicians, an attorney and various other individuals charged with aiding the arch-gangster while he was a fugitive from justice. The Department of Justice is making a round-up of all persons suspected of collusion with the Dillinger gang. Vigorous prosecution in each case is promised.

It is obvious that the Government can not tolerate obstruction of justice by unscrupulous professional men who are in league with gangsters and who share their profits. In this case the lawyer is alleged to be the "master mind" in the plot to conceal Dillinger and Homer Van Meter during the Nation-wide search for them. The doctors are charged with performing operations to change the gunmen's appearance.

"Dillinger could not have survived as long as he did," said William Stanley, assistant to the Attorney General, in a recent address, "were it not for the fact that careless and coddling local officials tempted his ingenuity; and that unscrupulous lawyers and doctors were at his service and ministered to him, and women, of a certain type, smoothed his way." Mr. Stanley might have gone farther to say that criminal gangs could not exist without the assistance and protection of many citizens who are more venal than criminal.

One group profits from the sale of firearms to gangsters. It was recently estimated that 5,000 machine guns are in the hands of outlaws. Other accomplices provide shelter, transportation, etc., to criminals evading the law. In some cases men who would be afraid to wield a gun plan crimes to be executed by more reckless felons. In reality these people are a part of our criminal gangs, and they must be dealt with as such before we can expect to uproot organized crime.

It is a well known principle of law that the accomplice shares the guilt of the individual actually committing the crime. The confidential relationship between doctors and their patients, lawyers and their clients, can be protected without tolerating an alliance between such professional men and the underworld. Conviction of the shysters as well as the camp followers who aided Dillinger to continue his orgy of robbery and murder would be a salutary precedent.

On Liberalism.

Dr. Nicholas Murray Butler entitled his Southampton address this year, "The Attack on Liberalism." Unlike many who discuss that theme he attempted to define a liberal. He is one, said the president of Columbia, who supports and defends the principles involved in Magna Carta, the Petition of Right, the Bill of Rights and the Constitution of the United States. He is one who at any cost will defend liberty and oppose compulsion, whether the latter is by an individual despot, a small ruling class, or by a majority.

"The real liberal," he said, "is at once truly conservative, since he preserves and builds upon all that is best in the past, and progressive as well, since he constantly goes forward to new and constructive applications of his fundamental principles. There are very few radicals who are liberal; radicals are almost without exception advocates of compulsion in some one of its forms. Today it is liberty and liberalism which are attacked throughout the world."

A platform for liberalism has long been needed and especially so at the present time. For Dr. Butler is right in his basic assumption that liberalism and liberty are being crushed between the forces of radicalism and reaction, and that compulsion is not needed to make a better world.

Dr. Butler offers a platform for liberals which is at least thought-provoking. It calls for an adjustment of political philosophy to conform to the needs and conditions of the altered world brought by the march of science and convention. It calls for an individual outlook which shall be National rather than parochial in its vision. It calls for National policies which shall accept and not deny the fact that this planet "has become a small, compact and wholly interdependent group of populations." It calls not only for freedom of speech, assembly and worship, but also for "free and open access" to opportunities of livelihood. It calls, among other reforms, for a system of taxation which shall pay for social expenditures as they are made, and in which the raising of revenue rather than the penalization of wealth shall be the objective.

Dr. Butler's program is a liberal one; it is not radical. Already our joining the International Labor Organization and certain results of the New Deal signify much national willingness to go in the direction he recommends. But other results show a most illiberal drift. Manifestly, it is these which the speaker had in mind in warning that we must always be on guard against compulsion, which is often cleverly disguised, sometimes as a National mandate, sometimes as an extension of democratic rule.

In order to have a true liberalism we must recall the principles upon which the charters of liberty were built. We may well remember that the preamble to the Constitution begins, "We, the people" and not "We, the Government." It should never be forgotten that the state exists for the benefit of the citizen, and not, as under Roman law, the citizen for the benefit of the state. That distinction, after all, is the background of liberalism.

Mrs. Mooney.

Mrs. Mooney must have died as all mothers would want to die—secure in her faith in her son's innocence. Unable after many years of toil to bring about his freedom, the turning wheel of political fortune pointed to the possibility of his release in the near future. Upton Sinclair, throughout his strange campaign, has pledged the pardon of Tom Mooney as one of his first acts in the event of his election. And it is quite evident that he has lost no votes on that account.

Like other mothers of history, Mrs. Mooney became a sort of symbol of motherhood through her unyielding devotion to her son. Whatever the judgment of the courts, to her the prisoner at San Quentin was always innocent. And so this valiant mother, always poor and always humble, allowed her impregnable faith to force her down pathways alien to her upbringing and her world. She lived for only one thing—the redemption of Tom Mooney's good name.

It is regrettable that she died without realizing this dream. To a mother, no torture can be more poignant than that of believing her son a victim of the cruelty of the world into which she brought him. The case of her own child must have been all the more cruel to Mrs. Mooney in view of the widespread belief in her son's innocence of the outrage for which he is still incarcerated.

Tom Mooney, whether rightly or wrongly, has become a tradition and a symbol in America's fight for industrial democracy. Mrs. Mooney was also a symbol in the great tradition of motherhood, unwilling and unable to believe anything but good of her boy.

It's Not All Our Fault.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: May I be permitted to ask a question of you? Is it America's desire that Europe should go to war again? It would seem so from the manner in which you newspapers predict war. As a Nation the U. S. A. is not keen about fighting; is not unwilling to declare itself pacifist. Why, then, wish war again on nations which have no desire for it? Your point of view would be different, perhaps, if you had fought 4 years instead of a quarter of that time 17 years ago. "Guns Over Europe!" For God's sake, haven't you anything healthier and more honest to write about?

In this same issue you report the arrest of two boys who, with toy pistols, held up five others of their own age and "robbed" them of 6 cents. Where is there any sense of humor or honesty in this on the part of either parents or law?

Why didn't the five boys react? Your children are being brought up on a diet of gangsters (wooden guns and all) and highway robbery. The headlines of your papers literally hurl these things at the smallest youngster's head. Bandits are given first place in your newspapers, movies and radio programs. And when two boys follow up these manifold examples, instead of father or mother giving them a whole-hearted and healthy strapping, they are arrested by the police! A brand is put on them at an early age—it should be on those who brought them up.

Were the parents of Lincoln and Washington of such poor stuff? King Solomon was a father—he was wiser than any modern parent—"spare the rod and spoil the child." But take the blame upon yourselves. There is a great lack of honesty among grown people of today. I wish I could think you would publish this, but I know you will not—Pollyanna rules.

AN OLD-FASHIONED CITIZEN.

The Movie Evil.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: I believe that one of the most potent influences that serve to promote and stimulate unrest among the masses in America is the motion picture.

The real social danger lies in the fact that the display of gay night life of the upper strata in their elaborate club life, as portrayed in many scenarios, has served to create among the younger generation of the toiling masses the psychology of the leisure class. This visual portrayal of leisure-class activities, though quite often overdrawn, nevertheless stimulates an intense desire for luxurious ease and extravagant pleasure, with a concomitant contempt for manual labor.

The movies have taught many young people of the lower middle classes to associate respectability with freedom from honest toil. The parents of these young men and women can hardly do more than furnish them with the necessities of life. Yet these youngsters, especially those of high-school age, require cash as well as automobiles to adequately take part in the social activities of today's modern youth. Where are they going to get the money in order to have face among their associates?

As far as children are concerned, there is a crying need for statutory regulation of movie houses, by establishing age limits for certain productions that children under no circumstances should see.

The resultant leisure-class psychology that is nurtured in the minds of young children is teaching them to grow up thinking in terms of whoopee parties, roadhouses and expensive cars. As they reach maturity their lavish dreams are frustrated. The final result of these frustrated dreams is a mind that is potently fertile to nourish the seeds of crime and of class hatred stimulated by Communistic propaganda.

As an afterthought, I might suggest that certain days be set aside in every theater for the children, where they can see those pictures that stimulate patriotism, integrity and good citizenship.

German Problems.

United States employers, harried by labor troubles, will be keenly interested in Germany's 1934 version of an industrial relations system.

Germany, in effect, squeezes out both employe representation and unionism as the United States knows them. And the same law that sets up their system—the 1934 act for the organization of national labor in Germany—also gives the Nazi party practically a direct voice in company personnel management.

The opening paragraphs of the act sound encouraging, perhaps, to the employer:

"In each establishment the owner . . . as the leader (der Fuehrer) . . . and the salaried and wage-earning employes as his followers shall work together for the furtherance of the purposes of the establishment and for the benefit of the nation and the state in general.

"The leader shall make decisions for his followers . . . in matters governed by this act. . . . The latter shall be loyal to him as fellow-workers of the works community.

"In every establishment employing at least 20 salaried and wage-earning employes, establishment rules shall be issued in writing by the leader.

"Rules shall be legally binding on the members of the establishment."

The leader must include terms of employment in the rules for his establishment—hours, dates for payment, principles for calculating piece-work, causes for discharges without notice and so on. If the leader wishes, he may also include rules for wages, discipline, safety and conduct.

So far, so good. The employer seems to have complete control over his men.

And the law goes even further: The leader can fine his followers for "offenses against the discipline or safety of the establishment."

Only a slight check on the employer's power appears with the provision for a "confidential council," made up of "confidential men" appointed from the followers or employes in companies employing 20 or more men. This council operates such as a shop committee or a group of employe representatives operates in the United States; it advises the leader on matters concerning imposition of fines, working conditions, rules, safety and so on.

"But now comes the first jolt—and what a jolt!

"Every year in March the leader of the establishment shall draw up a list of confidential men . . . in agreement with the chairman of the National Socialist (Nazi) establishment cell organization."

"And here's a jolt for employes:

"The following shall then decide for or against the list by ballot."

The employe has no choice of representatives; he votes for or against the list only.

But the act has not yet finished with the employer; if the politician spotted in each plant by the Nazi party as the head of its cell doesn't approve the leader's list of confidential men, or if the followers fail to vote for it.

"The labor trustee may appoint the requisite number of confidential men."

Who are these labor trustees?

"Labor trustees shall be appointed for large, economic areas. They shall be federal officials."

And what a labor trustee can't do in the field of labor relations is scarcely worth bothering about. With almost dictatorial powers, he is expected to "insure the maintenance of industrial peace." His authority extends even to forbidding employers to lay off workmen and, in extreme cases, to dictating wages. And he must at all times "keep the federal government supplied with information as to social progress"—an authority which bodes ill for the employer who bucks Nazi policies.

But this is only the beginning. Both employer and employe must live up to the "duties incumbent upon him in consequence of his position in the works community."

And if he doesn't? If an owner, a leader or a supervisor abuses his authority over his men by "wounding their sense of honor?" If a follower "endangers industrial peace?" What then?

The labor trustee may place his case before an "honor court" made up of a judge, a leader and a confidential man. If the offender is found guilty, he may be fined 10,000 reichsmarks (about $4,000), disqualified as leader or confidential man or summarily removed from his position as executive or employe.

In the concluding section, the act ties up the employer's right to lay off men by decreeing that a lay-off which is not justified by the establishment's economic situation or which works a hardship on the employe, shall be handled in one of two ways: It shall be revoked; or it shall be alleviated by paying the employe compensation which does not exceed one-third of his previous year's earnings. The federal labor courts decide whether or not a lay-off is justified, and what compensation the employe gets.

The Post Impressionist

Old England And New Deal.

Postoffice, Tuesday.

A. FENNER BROCKWAY is rather a radical of the real red stripe. But he is also a real Britisher. This combination, as you must have observed in other instances, proves very painful for the individual burdened with it. There is no denying, however, that its reactions are interesting to the alien—and so we look forward with avid anticipation to Mr. Brockway's volume, "Will Roosevelt Succeed?"

By "Roosevelt," we should inform you, Mr. Brockway means not the old Theodore Roosevelt tradition here and there reraising its head, but that tradition now in the making at the hands of the present President. By "look forward" we delicately imply that the book has not yet been published in the Roosevelts' country. Nevertheless, though we should like to learn what A. F. B. thinks of the ancient tradition's remnants, we are consoled by the London Times, which gives a most enlightening view of Mr. Brockway's view of the New Deal.

Mr. Brockway writes from no distant eminence; he has been "amang us takin' notes." This Times critic informs us that the radical, "worried at the trend of events in the Old World, and hearing from the New the glad news of a statesman who had at last realized that 'competitive capitalism' had broken down," came to America "determined to find out if the Roosevelt experiment was going Socialist or Fascist." And the London house of Routledge has given England these results of his observations here.

It appears that, in our fair capital, Mr. Brockway at first found the cheering section of the New Deal so enthusiastic as to be wellnigh hysterical: "Young radicals were licking their lips at the thought of unbridled planning." But soon A. F. B. set out for some field work: "Not content with hearing the cities' plans for the farmers, he went into the country districts"—and he "experienced disillusionment."

We are assured that he "discovered bitterly discontented men, bewildered by their own helplessness and poverty, resenting the destructive features of the recovery plans." He says, with fine naivete: "A very large section of the farmers regarded it as morally wrong to destroy crops and cattle."

And he says a whole lot about "the plight of the American working classes" at large. Their "rugged individualism" has "collapsed." We read of the worker, in the Times' review: "No longer does he regard unions with suspicion and protective legislation as mollycoddling; the first effects of the NRA were an outburst of strikes and an amazing increase in trade-union membership. Yet when American labor was consulted in the formulation of industrial codes, they demanded little more than the restrictions on competitive capitalism imposed in England by pre-War Liberal Governments."

In Detroit, A. F. B. observed "the Compliance Board, which is supposed to supervise working conditions in industries not under the Code, without a meeting-place or a stenographer, working 50 hours a week, and two months in arrears with its work. . . . In one steel center the employers' opposition was so strong that Miss Frances Perkins, Mr. Roosevelt's Secretary of Labor, was not allowed to speak in the Town Hall, so she spoke from the steps of the Postoffice, which is Federal property!" . . .

When Mr. Brockway returned, after a few months, to Washington, he found the erstwhile enthusiasts, we are told, much "quieter people."

As you might suspect from all these quotations, Mr. Brockway possesses "too vivid an imagination to produce one of those objective analyses of the New Deal which tell so much about figures and so little about people." And it is evident that he doesn't approve of some of the people who handle, or handled, the New Deal's propaganda. Effective, but crude, his reviewer calls their tactics, and he says A. F. B. "found in many places patriotic emotionalism reminiscent of the War." The author, anyhow, tells this story of "a Recovery Crusader who was asked at a meeting why grain was being stored while people were going hungry" in many sections of the country:

"The Crusader lept to the front of the platform. 'Do you believe in Christ?' he demanded fiercely. The young man replied that he wanted an economic answer to an economic question. Again the Crusader thundered his question, 'Do you believe in Christ?' The young man replied that he believed that Christ was crucified for demanding a straight deal for the poor. The Crusader smiled triumphantly, 'Then you do believe in Christ! He said that we had the poor with us always.' The Crusader resumed his seat as if there were no more to be said."

However, to get back to Mr. Brockway's answer for his question, "Will Roosevelt Succeed?" He believes that, already, the New Deal has dealt too gently in cases like Mr. Ford's, too weakly in its supervision over the workings of the codes in general. He "fears that America will drift into Fascism, with a Corporative State where the captains of industry will rule in fact if not in theory."

* * *

But what we should rejoice to learn is just how far A. F. B.'s findings are those of the Comrade Brockway, Socialist, and how far they are those of A. Fenner Brockway, British subject.

Barging Through Europe With Carlisle Bargeron

An Affair.

IN THE BALTIC SEA—Oh, Aleck: I am so excited! I am having an affair of the heart with a woman member of the crew on this Russian boat. The Russian women go in for the sea, you know, Aleck.

BARGERON

Well, all the way across the Atlantic I noticed how the officers of the ship in their natty uniforms always took the pretty girls off, to sit in the moonlight and talk honeyed talk. I have been just crazy, Aleck, for someone to do this to me. But, of course, no American officer would do this to me. So I bided my time until I got on a Russian boat. The minute I saw this girl I knew my heart was gone. I came to my stateroom immediately and tidied up and put my beret on at just the right angle.

Then I went up on deck and sat demurely in my chair.

* * * *

She passed me four or five times, before she would give me a tumble and I appeared not to notice her. Finally when they served tea and cakes I said sweetly to her: "Won't you have a cake?" Then she sat down beside me, Aleck. I was thrilled to death.

"I'll bet you will be glad when the trip is over and your responsibility ended," I said coquettishly. "You ship people appear so brave to me."

Then she opened up and started telling me of her trips on the Seven Seas. I don't believe she has been on any Seven Seas because I understand she is just a college girl working in vacation. All of our ships have college boys on them so I can imagine that she is just the counterpart on a Russian ship.

At least I hope so, because I would hate to think I was flirting with just a regular deck-hand.

* * * *

She is no slow worker. She told me she thought I had pretty eyes. I affected a blush and said:

"I'll bet you tell that to every man you meet."

Then she laughed with her devil-may-care laugh that goes with the sea.

* * * *

I do not intend to let her get too serious. Because I could never give her my whole heart. Do you believe, Aleck, that in any of the shipboard affairs that one gives his or her whole heart to the other? I do not believe so, Aleck.

I do not see any harm in having a little innocent flirtation, though, do you?

Well, I don't want you to get nervous about me. I am going to watch my P's and Q's and you must bear in mind that by now I am not the innocent fellow I was when I left the States. I have picked up a lot of knowledge and sophistication, believe me.

Every time she gets too serious, Aleck, I just evade her. One little trick I have is to jump up and say: "Oh, let me get you some more tea," and again, I grab her hand impulsively and say, "let's run in and see who's dancing."

You can tell I know what to do, can't you Aleck?

I am going to have a hard job, though. She seems very annoyed at times when I evade her. Tonight she sought to put her arms around me and I said right quickly: "Oh, oh, no strong-arm stuff." Then more soothingly, "You must give me time. After all a heart quickly given is easily withdrawn."

Ain't that the stuff, Aleck?

You know what, I'll bet she is married but she insists she isn't. Oh, Aleck, it is so exquisite. Sometimes I think maybe I will let her kiss me. Do you believe one kiss would do any harm, Aleck? After all, I'll never see her again when we reach port.

Oh, what am I to do? She seems so big and strong and handsome!

Long to Direct 'Vice War' From 'Throne' in Hotel

New Orleans, Sept. 3 (AP).—Senator Huey P. Long went back to his old skyscraper hotel "throne" room tonight to direct the final moves in his bitter "war" to remove Mayor T. Semmes Walmsley from political control of New Orleans.

Twelve floors above the street in busy downtown New Orleans, with husky bodyguards holding the passages to his suite, the Louisiana "Kingfish" kept his own counsel as he prepared to continue tomorrow his legislative investigation into "vice and corruption" in the city government.

Meanwhile his National Guardsmen still moved about the city mysteriously to "protect" the legislative committee.

Long had been staying at his home in a fashionable section of the city since he stormed into town late Friday with a company of soldiers. Today he dispensed with the military guard around his palatial home and moved into the hotel, from which he has directed all his major political battles.

West Virginia Exempts Schools From Sales Tax

Clarksburg, W. Va., Sept. 3 (Spl.).—Although everyone who buys anything in West Virginia for more than 5 cents is paying the State a 2 per cent consumers' sales tax, county school board purchases are exempt.

R. R. Powell, financial secretary of the Harrison County Board of Education, said all school supplies furnished the board will not bear the tax. He says he has been notified by officials at Charleston to that effect.

Better Housing Drive Meeting Set for Today

Littlepage, Chairman, and Fleming Will Discuss Capital Program.

Action begins in the Washington Better Housing Campaign today with a conference between Thomas P. Littlepage, chairman of the campaign, and Robert Fleming, president of the Board of Trade.

Littlepage will return to Washington this morning from his country place near Bowie, Md. A leading attorney, former head of the merged Chamber of Commerce and a man who has been long prominent in civic activities, he has declared the intention of organizing "right away."

The chairman said yesterday that plans for the calling of a general meeting of civic leaders will be announced after the conference with Fleming. It is expected that today or tomorrow the call will go out for the meeting, which will organize a "sales promotion" effort to persuade Washingtonians to improve or alter their homes.

The campaign is the spearhead of the Federal Housing Administration's drive throughout the Nation. In the effort to make Washington the example for the rest of the country, Federal officials will cooperate with organizers here wherever possible. W. D. Flanders, field director of the FHA, is known to have considered taking personal charge of the District drive, in the effort to put it over "in a big way." It is expected that radio, newspaper, motion picture and every other form of publicity will be employed.

The FHA "big push" is the Administration's chief weapon to move the depression away from the heavy industries, where it has lingered longer than it has anywhere else. It has been estimated that most of the millions who still remain jobless are those who normally would be employed in the building and affiliated trades, which began to decline even before 1929.

Washington banks are beginning to make loans under the FHA plans, which guarantee them up to 20 per cent. The campaign is designed to stimulate a demand for these loans.

Gang Quartet Held in Attack

Policeman Grimes Beaten Unconscious at Silver Hill, Md.

Four men, described by police as members of an Anacostia "hoodlum gang," were arrested yesterday as alleged participants in an attack last Friday on Policeman Everett Grimes, of the Eleventh Precinct.

Grimes was beaten unconscious near a beer garden in Silver Hill, Md. The suspects arrested yesterday were taken to Marlboro, Md., on warrants charging each with assault with intent to kill. They gave their names as Dorsey H. Kelly, 30, of the 1500 block of Good Hope road southeast; William F. Loughrey, 21, of the 1300 block of T street southeast; Francis Diggs, 28, of the 1200 block of V street southeast, and Richard Walsh, 26, of the 1600 block of T street southeast.

Grimes, who remained unconscious several hours after the attack, was released yesterday from Casualty Hospital. He told authorities he visited Silver Hill to make arrangements for a hunting trip and was ambushed by the gang as he left a beer garden.

Warrants against four other men were also issued at Marlboro yesterday. Police said the attack was prompted by "a long-felt grudge" against Grimes.

Peery's Cousin Dies in Tazewell

Prominent Merchant Was Ill Short Time.

Tazewell, Va., Sept. 3 (Spl.).—Will Ed Peery, 62, prominent merchant, died at his home here last night, after a brief illness of heart trouble.

Mr. Peery, a cousin of Gov. George C. Peery, had engaged in the hardware and undertaking business in Tazewell for many years.

Surviving are three daughters and two sons: Virginia, Margaret, Lyde, Robert and James Peery. Mrs. S. B. Vaught, of Bristol, Va., is a sister. Funeral services probably will be conducted Wednesday morning.

W. C. Hall to Represent Virginia at Tax Parley

Leesburg, Va., Sept. 3 (Spl.).—Wilbur C. Hall, Loudoun County's Representative in the General Assembly, has been appointed a delegate to represent the Commonwealth of Virginia at the Twenty-seventh Annual Conference of the National Tax Association to be held in Boston, Mass., October 1 to 5.

Mr. Hall, who is chairman of the finance committee in the Assembly, was appointed by Gov. Peery.

'Blind Bar' War Renewed Here By Bartenders

Hotel, Restaurant Group Will Make New Appeal to Commissioners.

Another appeal to the District Commissioners to remove the "blind bar" regulations from the present District liquor control rules will be made by the Washington Hotel and Restaurant Employes Alliance.

The alliance is actively supporting a change in the regulations that will permit the mixing of drinks in public. They supported a move to make the "mixologists" do their mixing in public last month, and since then say they have found additional reasons for pressing the request.

Among them are the claims that patrons are frequently not getting the drinks they order and that sanitation has been sacrificed to profits. This latter claim, it was said, was advanced when reports were made that fruits salvaged from "left overs" were being used in other drinks.

The bartenders also observed that the risks of their profession had been increased by the use of siphon bottles not covered by a mesh netting. Six of their number have been injured by siphon-bottle explosions.

Washington is the only major city in the country where drinks are mixed in private, the alliance executive committee pointed out. They reviewed the charges they made in the first public hearing before the District Commissioners that unscrupulous bartenders often used cocktail ingredients the second time and could, without fear of detection, substitute an inferior brand for the brand desired.

One of the main reasons for desiring a second airing of their grievances is the fact that Commissioner Daniel I. Sultan has replaced former Commissioner Gotwals and has not heard the complaints made by the alliance members.

Dairy Festival Plans Exhibit

Fourth Annual Piedmont Event to Be Held in Manassas.

Manassas, Va., Sept. 3 (AP).—Plans for the fourth annual Piedmont (Va.) Dairy Festival, to be held here Friday, September 28, were reaching their final stages today as officials and committee members reported themselves optimistic over their prospects for this year's festival.

The United States Department of Agriculture, the Washington Dairy Council, the American Guernsey Cattle Club, the American Jersey Cattle Club, the Holstein-Friesian Association of America and Virginia Polytechnic Institute.

The general purpose of the exhibits will be to stress the value of milk and the importance of dairy herd improvement.

The Glee Club from Fredericksburg State Teachers College has accepted an invitation to attend. Electric amplifiers will carry all proceedings to the spectators.

A holiday automobile trip for four Washingtonians ended disastrously near Altoona, Pa., when Leola Knapp, 19, was killed and her three companions seriously injured as the machine in which they sped, left the road, clipped off four telegraph poles, turned over four times and came to rest in a deep ravine.

Besides Miss Knapp, Robert G. Lewis, 1215 East Capitol street; Naomi Bradley, 20, and Wayne Goss, the latter two also of Washington, the Associated Press reported, were injured in the mishap.

The injured were taken to an Altoona, Pa., hospital.

Labor Day Exodus.

Pack the car—
The summer's o'er . . .
Where's the dog?
Don't slam that door! . . .
Have you packed
The golfing junk?
Here's your fishpole . . .
Where's the trunk?

Did you haul
The boat ashore?
Did we pay
Up at the store?
Where's my coat,
Who packed the hats?
No, we'll leave
Those two straw mats.

Did you clean
The icebox, Flo?
Those big plates
Are mine, you know . . .
Yes, we'll take
The butter home . . .
Hey! Who took
My brush and comb?

Where are all
The bathing shoes?
Don't forget
Those two canoes! . . .
Where'll we put
'Em? . . . I dunno . . .
Anywhere
That they will go.

Who's got all
The tennis things? . . .
Yes, I'll take
Those napkin rings . . .
Papa's reel?
Now lemme see . . .
Let him look—
Don't bother me!

Fish lines? They're
Not my affair . . .
Yes, put in
That rocking chair . . .
No, that clock
It isn't ours . . .
Hurry, please,
It looks like show'rs.

Pack those pans
And pack those pots!
Yes, we'll take
Those Army cots . . .
Certainly
We'll take the beer—
We may not
Come back next year.

Surfboard? Say,
You had it last . . .
No, we'll leave
That dinghy mast . . .
Where's the cat?
Now, lissen, sap:
You can hold
Her in your lap.

Blankets? Yes,
They've gotta go . . .
Roll 'em up;
You're very slow.
Pack those things
So they won't spill . . .
Have we paid
The water bill?

Put the porch
Screens all away . . .
Leave a note,
"No ice today" . . .
Gosh, the car
Looks like a truck . . .
We'll get home—
If we have luck!

Well, we're off . . .
Move over, please!
John can sit
On Ethel's knees . . .
Gee, I think
I'm gonna faint . . .

A Governmental Problem.

Secretary Ickes recently spent two sleepless nights on a railroad, the sharp stops, frequent switchings, &c., keeping him hanging to the side of his berth most of the time. "It was a railroad to which loans of several millions had been made, too," he said. "I thought of that all night and wondered why the hell I had approved."

* * * *

As anybody who tries to sleep on a railroad these days knows, the idea of not arousing the passengers has become distinctly old-fashioned.

Exploitation's End Seen by Sinclair

Says Present System Is Destroying Itself.

New York, Sept. 3 (AP).—Upton Sinclair, Democratic nominee for Governor of California, in a message to Henry Goddard Leach, published in the September issue of Forum, sums up his purposes by declaring for "a world from which exploitation of man by man has been abolished and in which it is impossible for a man to consume wealth without having produced an equivalent amount of wealth."

Sinclair says that it follows from this premise that "it will be impossible for a man to produce wealth and fail to receive its equivalent in the form of purchasing power."

Sinclair says he has been told his plans were "Utopian and a problem for some far off generation" and that he had answered that "the present system was one which would eliminate itself; that it contained within itself its own seeds of destruction and would break down in my lifetime. That prophecy has now come true."

The National Gallery

DONALD RANDALL RICHBERG, general counsel of NRA. Coerced, shadowed, warned to cease firing on Sam Insull, he won his case. While vigorously representing railroad brotherhoods, he wrote poems, songs, books, ran for office, practiced law with Harold L. Ickes until he was called here to draft the NRA act. Now directs a clearing house for New Deal doings. Once boosted for U. S. Supreme Court, mentioned as a Morgan partner, his contribution to the movement that produced the NRA has been invaluable. A trenchant speech-maker, he is cultured, clever, large of frame, spare of hair and sardonic of mind. Despite the terrific grind of his work he has kept his golf smooth . . . well up in the eighties.

Such a large proportion of those who have been pictured by Mr. Robles have asked for the originals that The Washington Post is saving all these drawings to honor the requests of any future members of "The National Gallery."

Tree Never Grows Enough to Remove Scar

By Robert Quillen.

He was born on the wrong side of the railroad tracks. That alone was a handicap impossible to overcome in a small town, but there was another and graver charge against him. He came unwanted and without benefit of clergy.

Young Dr. Snow attended the mother, without hope of payment, and later reported a matter that set gossip tongues a-wag for miles around.

On the child's left arm, near the shoulder, appeared a brown birthmark in the form of a hangman's noose. The mother herself so described it. "A fitting brand," said the gossips, "for a woods colt."

Such things are not forgotten in a small town. When the boy was old enough to run at large, other children were forbidden to play with him. Cautious parents assumed that his origin made him a bad influence.

But the sons of the righteous, while avoiding him in public, secretly paid pins and pennies to see the prophetic mark of his doom. It was a thing to remember.

The outcast family moved away after a while and nobody knew or cared where they had gone.

Years later a young sign painter drifted into town, worked at his trade for a few months and then got a job at Bolt's hardware store.

He wore a beard in spite of his youth, and that caused some talk at first; but he was ordinary in other respects—quiet, polite and industrious—and the town soon accepted him.

In a few years he had a business of his own, and apparently made money, but he accumulated nothing more. He was too generous. He seemed to know where help was needed, and gave it tactfully and without show.

It was his desire to serve that overcame his reluctance when people urged him to become their magistrate. He held the office for years, without opposition, and his judgments were so uniformly fair that his name became a synonym for justice.

He never married, and there was no one in the house with him when he suffered the first stroke of angina.

Old Doc Snow attended him and discovered his secret. There was a birthmark on his left arm in the shape of a hangman's noose.

Very few people attended the funeral.

Oil Operator Again Victim Of Holdup Men

Julian R. May Shot Two Times, "Through With Gas Business."

Twice beset by thieves who not only robbed the till of the Shell Oil Co., 4401 Connecticut avenue northwest, but inflicted on him injuries which sent him to Emergency Hospital, Julian Roy May, attendant at the station, yesterday expressed himself as "through with the gasoline business."

From his bed at the Emergency Hospital, where he is recuperating from bullet wounds in his left leg and thigh, May yesterday described the latest attack upon him. He was hit on the head by his assailants, who took approximately $150.

Rushing from the place after the two men had left, May encountered Sergt. C. E. Perry, of the Eighth Precinct, who took him to the hospital and then organized a search for the robbers.

Police found that three shots had been fired in the station, one of them cutting through a ceiling, and the other two striking May. The bullets were fired from a small-caliber automatic.

Six weeks ago May was attacked by two thugs, who threw him over a rock-strewn embankment after they had taken money from the till. He had returned to his post but three weeks when the second attack occurred. Even while he was in the hospital thieves robbed the station, police said.

Attempts of the police to learn whether the two men who shot him yesterday were the same two who robbed the station and threw him over the embankment six weeks ago failed when May declared he was unable to identify his assailants.

He said that he opened the station at 6:45 a. m. yesterday and was still leaning down, after opening the safe, when he was hit on the head.

As the men ran from the station, May said, one of them said, "You'd better throw that gun away." Despite a thorough search, police were unable to find the weapon, though they did find an ice pick that had been carried halfway down the incline behind the station. This was identified as belonging to the station.

Gas Stations Ask NRA to Set Uniform Price

Independents Demand Zoning Regulations Be Abrogated.

Balked in their earlier efforts to have the major oil distributing companies of nearby Maryland and Virginia fix a uniform price for the suburban Maryland and Virginia areas, the independent gasoline dealers of adjacent counties plan an appeal to the National Recovery Administration today.

The NRA petroleum board will be asked to establish a compulsory minimum net charge, James H. Pugh, of Rockville, Md., attorney for the newly formed independent gasoline dealers of Montgomery County, said. At the same time, dealers in nearby Virginia said they would be represented by A. M. Remschel, of Alexandria, who is attorney for the National Association of Gasoline Dealers.

The dealers' complaint is that they have been forced to go into "the red" to sell gasoline at a price commensurate with that charged by local dealers. Many of them, Attorney Pugh said, are on the verge of bankruptcy. As an example of the working of the present code, he showed that there were four price zones in Montgomery County, in each of which the dealers are charged varying wholesale prices.

This zoning regulation is the item that meets with the dealers' opposition. They have previously fought against it without avail and now they plan to ask its abandonment at the hands of the NRA.

Daily Talk About Books and Authors

"TUG-BOAT ANNIE."

Last year I saw Marie Dressler in this charming and affecting comedy of the screen; and I could not help thinking then, how remarkable it was that a woman who had lost, by the inexorable march of years, youth, beauty and grace, could by her intelligence and the compelling power of her art, exert such a spell over millions of spectators. And it was not alone by her art, consummate and complete as that was; she had a personality that illuminated every role she played; and somehow though she obliterated herself in the character she happened to be interpreting, we were all aware of her goodness, her kindness of heart, her personal integrity of spirit.

This effect was summed up in three words by Charles A. Hughes, secretary of the Detroit Athletic Club—SHE WAS GENUINE.

The stage name Marie Dressler was taken by Leila Koerber, born at Coburg, Canada, November 9, 1871. She borrowed the assumed name from her aunt, and made it famous. At the age of 14 she made her first appearance on the stage and she returned in a glorious triumph to the screen when she was past 60.

In 1914, however, she had tried the experiment of exchanging the stage for the motion picture; appearing with Charlie Chaplin and Mabel Normand in "Tillie's Punctured Romance." But the films did not have the appeal then that they have today, and she joyfully returned to the footlights.

During the American part of the war, she sold liberty bonds; and then, after the war, her financial situation became desperate. Many people believed that the screen was a place for the revelation of anatomical charms, rather than for the display of intelligence in acting. But Marie Dressler invaded Hollywood, captured it, and proceeded to capture America. "Tug-Boat Annie" showed no more skill and courage under difficulties than Marie Dressler showed in paddling her own canoe.

She gave realistic interpretations of real people; she portrayed the ordinary life of ordinary men and women, and made it thrilling by her sympathy and understanding.

She died at Santa Barbara, July 29, and innumerable newspaper editorials paid homage to her triumph as an artist and to the beauty of her character.

Nevada Votes Today; 5 Seek Pittman's Seat

Personalities Overshadow Issues in Democratic Campaign.

Reno, Nev., Sept. 3 (AP).—Candidates for major offices in Nevada's primary election tomorrow, including United States Senator Key Pittman (Democrat), and the five other aspirants to his seat, wound up their campaigns speaking at Labor Day celebrations throughout the State today.

Senator Pittman has primary opposition for the first time since 1912.

Personalities have overshadowed issues in the closing weeks and supporters of H. R. Cooke, one of Pittman's two opponents, have been waging a bitter fight against the State's so-called "bipartisan" political machine.

Pittman Disavows Machine.

The Nevada senior Senator, supporter of President Roosevelt's New Deal policies and one of the leaders in the Senate silver bloc, has disavowed any connection with the alleged machine and has sought reelection on the basis of his record of 22 years in the Senate.

Bob Moore, young Las Vegas business man, is the other candidate for the Democratic Senatorial nomination. His platform calls for "mandatory" silver legislation.

Candidates for the Republican nomination are State Engineer George W. Malone, Clyde D. Souter, Reno attorney, and August Frohlick, Reno justice of the peace.

Acting Gov. Morley Griswold, serving out the term of the late Gov. Frederick Balzar, has no opposition in the Republican primary for Governor.

Six Seek Nomination.

Those seeking the Democratic gubernatorial nomination are Richard Kirman, sr., Reno banker; former Representative Charles L. Richards, Reno attorney; former Lieut. Gov. Maurice J. Sullivan, Reno attorney; John Coopper, retired Reno merchant; Harley Harmon, Clark County district attorney, and Archie Grant, Las Vegas business man.

Former Gov. James S. Scrugham is unopposed as a candidate for the Democratic nomination to succeed himself as the State's only Representative in Congress. State Treasurer George B. Russell has no opposition in the Republican Congressional primary.

New Deal Aids Labor, Capital, Says LaGuardia

Leach Urges Consumers' Boycott for All Stores Bolting AAA Prices.

Chicago, Sept. 3 (AP).—New Deal policies as they affected capital and labor were lauded by New York's mayor, F. H. LaGuardia, in a Labor Day address at A Century of Progress today.

Henry Goddard Leach, editor of the Forum Magazine, in a second speech at the World's Fair, urged consumers to boycott all stores charging prices in excess of those published twice a month by the consumer's counsel of the AAA.

The New York mayor said:

"I, too, admire the 'rugged individual.' I still believe that he is a subject for the poet to sing about and the sculptor to carve into stone. But no 'rugged individual' can survive in the midst of collective starvation.

"Perhaps it is not pleasant to be regimented. But so far as labor is concerned, regimentation is no new idea. It took place a generation ago, when the hired laborer received a factory number and gave up his name. Regimentation is a natural development of the present industrial system. It has existed for a long time. If the working people are to be regimented, I would much rather see them regimented in honest labor, paying a decent living wage, than regimented on the relief rolls, on the bread lines and at the doors of private charity."

Strikes Discussed.

As to strikes, LaGuardia said:

"American labor always has problems which must be solved with American employers and American capital. It is fair to speak frankly on that point, too. A strike is the last means of solution, and not the first; it is justifiable only after every resource of discussion and negotiation has been tried and has failed. During strikes it must always be remembered that the public interest is paramount.

"The safety of great masses of people not parties to the discussion, and the functioning of Government, can never be a stake in any bargaining process. Starvation is not a legitimate weapon for capital to use against labor. It is no more legitimate for labor to use it against the public."

Leach charged that business has not put public interest before private profits.

"It is apparent that industry has seized upon this (the recovery program) to promote widespread price fixing, and open price associations, bringing in their train uniform markups in goods, many of which are not sanctioned by the codes and are even contrary to the Federal antitrust laws," he said.

Consumer Suffers.

"I claim the humble consumer, who is the keystone of any program for National recovery, is between the devil and the deep blue sea.

"Business seems to feel that uniform price fixing is the answer to its economic ills. But we literate consumers know full well from experience that when this is placed in the hands of the business man who claims to be a 'rugged individual' we are exploited in the most 'rugged,' I would even say 'ruthless,' manner."

Leach predicted that if the plight of the consumer "is not alleviated there would be an epidemic of Nation-wide strikes by workers endeavoring to better their conditions."

The editor proposed two courses of action. The first was the creation of mass organizations in support of consumer agencies to protect the consumers' interests. The other was the organization of consumer cooperatives.

Mayor La Guardia said a shorter working day and a shorter working week must be adopted eventually in order that willing workers might find gainful employment.

Predicts Many Changes.

"We must emerge from this not only with a remedy, but with a system making impossible a repetition of the present depresson," he said. "Many changes will take place, but there is no use minimizing the necessity of these changes and their far-reaching effects."

These economic changes, said La Guardia, were in no way in conflict with any provision of the Constitution. However, he said, if it were found that any part of the program conflicted with the older provisions of the Constitution, there was a method of meeting the situation. He pointed out that the Constitution already has been changed 21 times by amendments.

"Business must have learned by this time, at its own great expense, that we can not just rest and wait for supply and demand to solve our problems," he said.

White House Goal Of March Today In Pickets' Cause

Another march on the White House will start today at 11 a. m.

This one will be by a more peaceably-inclined group than some of past years, however, as the 30 delegates from the International Labor Defense, the Unemployment Council, the Young Communists League, the International Workers Order and the Women's Communist League demand only to see Marvin H. McIntyre, President Roosevelt's secretary.

"We want the release of the five people who are in jail for picketing the German Embassy July 18," said an International Labor Defense official last night.

The 25-day sentences imposed on the five, Joe Zamoras, Sam Dickens, Sylvia Hartman, Freda Brice and Mary McCleave, colored, expire September 11, a week from today.

"It's not so much the time served as the principle of the thing," explained the I. L. D. official.

Moving in a drizzling rain, the Washington Labor Day parade comes down Pennsylvania avenue between solid rows of spectators who braved the weather to see the procession.

The weather didn't bother these youngsters who wanted to see the parade. They are Francis Calder and George Oberto.

Miss Nancy Burgess Simpson, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Manley Olin Simpson, became the bride of Lieut. (J. G.) Paul Walker Clarke, U. S. N., in the Calvary Episcopal Church at Front Royal, Va., at 5:30 o'clock Saturday, with the rector, the Rev. Tucker Watkins, officiating, in the presence of only the immediate family and a few close friends.

The bride, who was given in marriage by her father, wore a gown of ivory satin made on princess lines and carried an ivory leather-bound prayer book, from which her father and mother were married. The prayer book held a shower of white orchids and lilies of the valley.

The maid of honor was Miss Harrietta Robertson Crosley, of Annapolis, Md., who wore a gown of jonquil yellow crepe with turban and accessories of brown. She carried a bouquet of bronze yellow gladioli. The bridesmaids were Miss Mary Frances Simpson, cousin of the bride, and Miss Joyce Stokes, of Hertford, N. C., niece of the bridegroom. They wore pale yellow crepe frocks made like that of the maid of honor with matching turbans and shoes and carried arm bouquets of blush rose gladioli.

The bride, who was given in marriage by her father, wore a gown of pearl white satin made on princess lines with batteau neck and long, tight sleeves. She wore her mother's wedding veil, of tulle, edged with rosepoint lace and carried a shower bouquet of gardenias, lilies-of-the-valley and bouvardia.

The matron of honor was Mrs. Philip Wilcott and the maid of honor was Miss Sadie Roberts, of Birmingham, cousin of the bride. The bridesmaids were Miss Mary Harford, cousin of the bride; Miss Jean Miller, Miss Margaret Tutivieler and Mrs. William Walker. There were also four ribbon-bearers and a flower girl. All the attendants were gowned alike in models of crepe shading from pale pink worn by the matron and maid of honor to deep coral for the ribbon-bearers. The frocks were made with square neck lines and ruffled trains with matching slippers, and they carried bouquets of gladioli and delphinium.

Wedding Attendants.

The ribbon-bearers held white satin ribbons outlining the aisle through which the bridal party passed.

Lieut. Miller's best man was Lieut. Claude H. Bennett, of Washington, and the ushers were Capt. Walter Wachter, Lieut. Williams Howard, Lieut. Robert Morris, Lieut. Creed Burlingame, Lieut. New Depilatory Gives Valuable Aid to Beauty Helps Sheer Stockings to Flatter Instead of to Reveal Defects.

By Ruth Anne Davis.

THE beauty of sheer hose is ruined by hairy legs showing through. The beauty of an evening gown is marred by hairy arms. Beautifully groomed nails can not offset the ugliness of hairy hands. The beauty, the daintiness for which all women strive is made impossible by thick, unsightly growths of surplus hair.

Why so many women and girls allow these defects to exist is a question hard to answer. Many fear depilatories will cause their skin to break out in splotches. Others say that by removing one hair they cultivate a beard in its place. There are those who excuse themselves by saying they can't afford depilatories, and haven't the time anyway.

All objections are overruled by a beauty expert whose products represent the epitome of quality. She has a new depilatory in powder form which only requires a little dampening and rubbing-on to do a marvelously efficient job of hair-removing.

A jar of the powder comes in a set with a little glass bowl and glass mixing spoon, and a soothing oil for application afterwards. It takes only a few minutes to prepare enough powder to spread over quite a large area. When it dries, remove and off comes the hair with it.

The preparation is highly recommended by specialists.

A What's-It for the Bar.

One gadget that does five things, offered in a Connecticut avenue store, is causing a lot of comment. It looks like nothing in particular until it's taken apart and then it's a corkscrew, bottle opener, bottle stopper, measuring cup, and funnel.

It's fine equipment for the bar as it can be tucked away in the drawer and not take up needed space. Travelers find it handy as it can be carried easily in a pocket.

Stain Remover for Fingers.

Those having nicotine or other stains on their fingers will find a certain preparation carried by a downtown store splendid for removing them.

The most distressing stains are those that seep down back of the nails and lodge there impervious to soap and water and hard scrubbing. A tiny piece of cotton wrapped around the pointed end of an orange stick, and dipped in this preparation will break down the resistance of any stain, and not injure the skin. It costs very little.

Handbags Change "Fronts"

The most amazing thing has happened! There's something new in bags at last! For years and years handbags have been just handbags whether deep or shallow, round or square, plain or fancy. Now, however, one handbag is three handbags, since this recent innovation.

A downtown store has one that can be changed in the snap of a finger from a suede bag to a silk one, and from a silk one to a kid. It's all a matter of switching covers.

Evening bags designed around the same idea are easily transformed from taffeta, to silver and to gold.

A Lifetime Patter.

A perfectly flat, plain pasteboard box contains a valuable beauty aid. It's a pliant metal patter for pressing cream into pores and stimulating the skin.

Unlike most patters this one will last a lifetime. The wooden hand is replaceable. A flexible connecting stem gives the patter full play.

Creams, of course, should always be patted into the skin. Expert operators have a knack with their fingers but the average woman will find this patter an assistance.

Oil Lamps Offered.

Some tricky little oil lamps have appeared on the market to give home illumination in place of candlelight. The lamps have brass or copper bases and shades and glass chimneys. A wick gives out a soft low light equally as flattering as candlelight. New chimneys are available for a few cents. The lamps cost only half a dollar.

Vegetable Strainer.

A rotary strainer sold in the basement of a downtown store is used by many women for straining spinach and beets for children, and removing lumps from mashed potatoes. It's simply a round strainer with a metal piece that turns around inside of it.

Fall Suits at $13.95.

The woman who feels herself beyond the misses' styles, but who nevertheless can not see herself in the matronly outfits which some stylists recommend, might be wondering about a fall suit. Not her best suit, the one she's ready to "fork out" for, but that suit for any casual occasion. If she takes a look in the knit goods department of a local store she will find a three-piece rabbit hair suit for as little as $13.95.

One in an oxford gray is touched off with a diagonally striped blouse. For the woman who likes conservative things, but isn't averse to a bright touch, this will be an ideal suit. There are others in brown, green and rust.

This BUSINESS of LIVING

Fledgling in Religion Asks Whether to Leave Parents' Faith.

By Mary Haworth.

DEAR MISS HAWORTH: Do you think a girl of 18 is old enough to make her own decision regarding religious matters? I am one of five children, and my parents are very religious. They have brought us up very strictly, and always have required us to go to church with them on Sundays.

* * * *

For some time now, I have been out of sympathy with their religious views, and would like to be left free to think things out for myself. I have done a lot of reading along philosophical lines, and have reached the conclusion that unless your religion meets your own needs, and satisfies your own spiritual yearning, it has no value to you. But my parents seem to feel that an outward and complete conformity to an inherited creed is more important than anything else.

* * * *

I still go to church with them, but I am getting more and more rebellious about it. Do you think I would be making myself a "black sheep" to insist on my own rights as an individual in this matter?

THOUGHTFUL.

Meet Them Half Way.

DEAR DOUBTFUL: Your problem is one which every person of enterprising mind and sensitive, self-aware, hungry and questing spirit confronts, sooner or later, and resolves as best he can. You are to be congratulated, rather than condemned, for having discovered within yourself "the doubt low kinds exist without."

* * * *

Don't let your doubting make you arrogant and superior toward your parents' religious convictions, however. They, too, are to be admired for holding fast to that which is good, spiritually, to them. In seeking to place in your hands the torch of faith that has lighted their way of life, and sustained them through the trials and perplexities that are concomitant with existence, they are but displaying a very natural and wholesome concern for your happiness and welfare.

* * * *

In truth, had it not been for your strict upbringing in an atmosphere of orthodox Christianity, it is unlikely you would have known your present doubt—doubt which, reflectively developed, can not fail to add color, richness, and the charm of thoughtfulness to your character and personality.

Not all of us agree with proponents of the heterodox who find life more acceptable when divested of traditional religious creed. The light which filters through a stained glass window can possess a psychic healing more effective for some than ultra-violet rays in sunshine pouring through an open aperture.

* * * *

What is one man's meat is another man's poison—and that goes for the spirit as well as the flesh.

From reading philosophy you reached the conclusion, you say, that religious ceremonial is valueless when without personal significance. A sound enough conclusion. But can you not go a little further in philosophy, and transmute its revelations into practical application in this instance?

* * * *

Become a philosopher in fact. Bend to your parents' will yet a while in this matter of church going, with that tolerance which is the hallmark of the true philosopher. At the very root of philosophy is enlightened man's desire to live reasonably and harmoniously in a scheme of things he did not fashion and does not understand.

There is time ahead for leading your own life, and 18 is rather young to strike an attitude of full-fledged individualism.

Change in Fashion Scenery Advised by Fashion Doctors

By Amos Parrish.

NEW YORK, Sept. 3.—A change of scenery is good for anyone, as all just-back-from-vacation folk know. And plenty of changes of fashion scenery are in store for anyone who elects to wear that smart fall fashion, the dress with detachable neckwear. And that kind of scenery change is good for you, too, and for the people who look at you.

It isn't a new fashion, of course. But that doesn't make it any the less a fine fashion. And as it's done this fall there are new things about it.

Simply Cut Dress.

The dress itself is usually cut quite simply, especially about the neckline. And that makes it easy to fit all sorts of different neckwear on it.

The color of the dress is generally dark, the better to show off the bright, white or metal fabrics which are used at the neck.

And the fabric is apt to be a novelty weave . . . because the silhouette is so plain.

Scarfs and Plastrons.

You'll find all sorts of detachable scarfs. And bibs and plastrons . . long, oval, square, sometimes covering almost the entire front of the bodice, as in the dress illustrated.

Gilets, plain tailored and softly ruffled, are a-plenty. And there's no end to the simple—and not so simple—collars and cuffs which may be quickly whisked off and replaced by another quite different set.

One day you can wear your dress with simple white crepe neckwear. The next day, if you feel dressier, change off to metal lame or velvet.

If you want to look crisp, try taffeta, shot with metal, perhaps. And for a smart, old-fashioned touch, make your next day's neckwear bengaline.

Or Without Neckwear.

And, again, if you watch the neckline of your dress when you choose it, you can pick one becoming enough to wear without any neckwear at all.

Some of these detachable neckwear dresses are made with two pieces of neckwear, similar in cut but different in fabric, or different in cut.

But either way—with one or two—it's certainly a practical fashion.

Dresses of the types described are available in Washington in all the better dress shops and department stores.

These Soups 'Hit the Spot' On Chill Days

Recipes Won Mention in The Post's Weekly Contest.

WITH school opening soon, many mothers will be wondering what to serve their children for luncheon when the day is cold and dreary. The three recipes that received honorable mention in last week's contest will fit in very nicely on such a day. They were contributed by Mrs. W. N. Crawford, 4117 Thirty-seventh street northwest; Mrs. H. Burgess, of Madison, N. J., and Mrs. Ernest Jett, 907 New York avenue northwest. The recipes follow in order:

Corn and Chicken Soup.

4 cups chicken stock
1 cup of canned corn and put through a coarse sieve
½ cup minced celery
1 cup minced cold chicken
2 cups hot milk
2 egg yolks
2 tablesspoons butter

Simmer the celery, chicken and corn in the stock, for 25 minutes. Add the hot milk, butter, salt and pepper and heat thoroughly. Beat the egg yolks and pour one cup of the hot soup over them slowly, stirring constantly. Add this mixture to the soup. When thoroughly heated, serve at once with toast sticks.

New England Bean Soup.

2 cups navy beans
1 pound salt pork
2 cups tomato pulp
1 cup diced celery
1 chopped onion
1 small green pepper

Soak beans several hours, after they have been well washed. Cover with three quarts of water and simmer for two and one-half hours with pork which has been cut in small pieces. When beans are tender add other vegetables and continue cooking for 20 minutes. Just before removing from fire season with salt and small bay leaf.

Celery Soup.

3 cups celery cut in 1-inch pieces
2 cups boiling water
½ teaspoonful salt
2 tablespoonfuls flour
2 cups milk
⅛ teaspoonful pepper

Wash and scrape celery and cook until tender, then rub through a sieve. Heat milk in double boiler and add to celery. Then melt fat (butter). Add flour to this and season and mix with soup.

Child Chats

By Alice Fox Pitts.

IN THESE modern days, when feminine wardrobes are marked by simplicity, there is too little between mother's and daughter's clothes to make "dressing up" the constant pastime that it was in years gone by.

Yet little girls still love to parade in adult finery, and even without the thrill of trailing skirts, feather boas and ruffled petticoats, a dress-up box that will afford many happy hours can be equipped from discarded frocks and accessories.

Next time you are clearing out closets and bureau drawers, instead of throwing out the discard, save those articles that are particularly glamorous to childish eyes. A beaded bag, too dingy for use, always pleases. Faded scarfs may be used for sashes and turbans. A trailing evening gown is a sure winner.

For convenience, keep these garments and accessories in a box of their own, to be taken out on rainy days or whenever little girls ask, "What can we do now?"

Thursday—The Young Artist.

Twin Sweaters Come Again.

Twin sweaters were so popular last season as to be almost overdone. But you can't keep a good style down and this season they appear, even smarter than ever. Done with no variation in their simple lines, they are perfect for college girls who all want to look alike in their smartness and for sportswomen who, while earnest about their game, are interested in fashion.

What Today Means

"Virgo."

If September 4 is your birthday the best hours for you on this date are from 10:15 a. m. to 12:15 p. m., from 3:15 to 5:15 p. m. and from 7:15 to 9:15 p. m. The danger periods are from 8:15 to 10:15 a. m., from 5:15 to 7:15 p. m. and from 9:15 to 11:15 p. m.

If you wish to use good judgment on this date, you will guard your speech carefully. Any form of expressed irritability may prove a very expensive luxury to indulge in, for it may be very costly in the long run. Business will probably show a sluggish reaction to the holiday period, which caused such a lapse of time in activity. However, there should be a number of very encouraging indications noted, indicating that some desirable deals will be completed in the very near future. Be very careful you do not answer a friend or stranger too abruptly, as personal feelings on this date may prove to be supersensitive and a good many people may go around carrying chips on their shoulders. Engagements of a social nature may prove difficult to make, so it hight be well to wait another 24 hours, if possible, before trying to make them. Married and engaged couples, as well as those engaged in courtship, may avoid trouble if each one will comply with any reasonable request the other one makes, without argument.

If a woman and September 4 is your natal day, you may receive either letters, visitors or phone calls which should brighten your day considerably. Your natural inclination to mix readily with people and make friends should prove a great asset in any line of business bringing you into close contact with the buying public. As a saleswoman in a smart dress or millinery shop, a book store, you should do well. If in a position to follow a profession, either the medical, legal or chemical professions should offer unlimited opportunities for one with your personality. Your love to entertain can be gratified if, through marriage, you have your own home. A husband should prove a source of much joy.

If a child is born on September 4, when it grows up, it should prove very popular. Every educational advantage possible should be given this child, as it will probably take advantage of the opportunities offered it.

If a man, born on September 4, this should prove to be a very lucky day for you. It may prove advisable for you to always be very careful in writing either personal or business letters never to be indiscreet. You probably would be very successful in a professional career, although commercial life offers you opportunities to make money.

Successful people born on September 4:

Daniel H. Burnham, architect.
John H. Rauch, physician.
Phoebe Cary, poet.
Lyman C. Draper, historian and educator.

Steam Draws Splinters Out

Household Hint Given by Mrs. Duvall Offers First Aid.

QUITE often the housewife in performing her duties can not avoid running splinters in her fingers. Mrs. Mary V. Duvall, of Edmonston, Md., has submitted the following first aid treatment for this ailment:

When a splinter has become imbedded under the skin, it is not always easy to get it out by means of a fine needle. Fill a jar or bottle almost to the top with hot water. Press the affected part over the mouth of the jar or bottle and keep it in that position for a minute or two. The hot steam will draw the splinter up from the flesh so that it can easily be removed.

Another very helpful hint, sent in by Mrs. R. Kelso, 707 Fourteenth street southeast, is that velvet can be cleaned by rubbing it with a soft cloth dipped in powdered magnesia.

Every Tuesday and Sunday a group of household hints will appear on this page. Any suggestions you may have kindly address to Susan Mills, The Washington Post, Washington, D. C.

HONEYMOON MOUNTAIN

by Frances Shelley Wees

"THANK you," Deborah said sweetly. "I am sure you must be Pilar. I have heard so much about you."

Pilar looked a little startled, but she lost not a whit of her poise. "And aren't you glad to see me, too, Madeline?"

"Oh, rather," Madeline said coolly, and turned back toward the verandа.

"We must take you to Grandmother," Deborah explained.

"Lovely," Pilar said, in an audible whisper.

"Grandmother," Deborah murmured, "this is Miss D'Avillo. She is another friend of Sally's and Madeline's."

"I am so happy to welcome you, my dear," Grandmother said warmly.

Simon and Tubby and Bryn, all silent, came around the end of the veranda. Bryn's face, as he glanced at Deborah, was very queer and stiff; Tubby was white. Simon was detached, as usual.

Pilar smiled. She held out both hands. "My dear Bryn," she said affectionately. "Allow me to congratulate you; I think she is the loveliest thing I have ever seen."

Grandmother looked up swiftly at Deborah; and Deborah, calm now, smiled gently back, so that Grandmother's anxiety faded.

The rain which had threatened for 24 hours, came at last on Tuesday night. Deborah lay awake and listened to the soft steady fall on the balcony floor outside her bedroom window. She found herself wishing ardently that it might rain hard and long, so that the road might be impassable to Stuart Graham, so that nothing further should break in upon the peace and loveliness of the summer days.

From Another World.

Pilar was very beautiful, but the most troubling thing about her was the so obvious fact that she belonged to Bryn's world.

It wasn't that Pilar tried to talk about things Deborah must be unfamiliar with. Universities, football, great ballrooms with lines of "stags" in the doorways, who were supposed to "cut in."

Even Madeline and Sally talked eagerly about what they saw and did in the cities, and Simon and Tubby and even Bryn talked, too. It was obvious that they found the conversation interesting, now that Pilar had begun it, and Deborah had realized that ever since they had come to the mountain they had been thinking about their conversation and keeping it carefully to subjects which she could understand.

And all Bryn's talk about knitting and winter evenings by the hearth . . . all his interest in that simple sort of thing was pretended for her sake. Bryn was a gentleman, and he lived up to his bargains to the last pencil stroke.

Money. It seemed to Deborah that the kind of life Pilar talked about must take a great deal of money, and she wondered how Bryn could have lived it. She had already decided that his people must have been wealthy at one time. He may even have had money left to him.

Deborah slept very little that night. There didn't seem to be anything ahead but a lonely, unhappy time. Because Bryn would go back to Pilar when the year was up. Nobody could ever be like Bryn, even if he were only pretending. If he went on like this, even though the look in his eyes was only the tenderness one feels for a child, she wasn't going to be able to bear it when at the end of the year he drove out of the big gates to leave her forever.

Sophisticated Beauty.

The morning was cold and gray, although the rain had stopped at dawn. Deborah had a fire in the small sitting room downstairs, so that Grandmother might not feel a chill. When breakfast was over, Pilar and Madeline and Sally and Grandmother and herself were sitting. The three men were outside.

Madeline was lovely, but beside Pilar she faded; and Sally was little and curly-headed and babyish beside her. No man could keep from watching Pilar and thinking how lovely she was.

"I hope you don't mind my coming here uninvited like this, Mrs. Larned," she was saying in her low voice.

"My dear, you are more than welcome," Grandmother said warmly. "Any friends of Bryn's are our friends too, and our home is always open to them. And I am delighted to hear you discussing details of modern society. I am sure your talk will be a liberal education for Deborah, and help her to establish herself more easily when she goes out into Bryn's world with him."

Pilar's black eyes rested momentarily on Deborah.

"There will be no difficulties for Deborah," she said tenderly. "Every one will fall in love with her at first sight."

"Just as Bryn did," Sally added, and looked fleetingly at Pilar.

"How long are you planning to stay, Pilar?" Madeline said evenly.

"I really hadn't considered it. I wasn't sure I'd be invited to stay, you see. How long are you going to be here, the rest of you?"

"I think we'll all go by the end of this week, at the latest, won't we, Sally? It all depends." And her glance at Deborah said, significantly, that it all depended on Stuart Graham.

"So soon?" Pilar said. "Oh, dear. I suppose it means I must go when you do. But I don't want to. I think this is the most beautiful place I've seen."

"You needn't go, Pilar," Deborah said swiftly. "Really. We'll be delighted to have you stay."

"Oh," Pilar replied, with a faint smile at Grandmother. "Why, you've scarcely had a honeymoon at all, yet. I wouldn't dream of staying."

Sally looked at her coldly.

Grandma's Plan.

"I have an idea, my dear," Grandmother said with a smile. "I have been about to propose it to Sally and Madeline, but if they must go, I will mention it to you. How would you like to stay here and be company for me while Deborah and Bryn go on a trip together."

Pilar stared at her. Madeline bent swiftly and buried her forehead in the puppy's coat. Sally put the back of her hand to her lips.

Grandmother went serenely on. "They haven't been able to go away until now," she explained. "And if you like it here so well, dear, you might be quite content to stay with me until their return, and we might ask a few of your friends, if it threatened to be lonely for you."

"I think that would be marvellous," Pilar said at once, with enthusiasm.

"I don't think I want to go away," Deborah said.

Pilar smiled. "But you ought to go, child," she said kindly. "I should think the modern world would seem a very frightening place for a quaint little darling such as you are."

Grandmother gave a little sigh. "I am so thankful that when Deborah does emerge into society she will have dear Bryn to take care of her. He understands so well what her life has been."

"Bryn has always been a dear," Pilar agreed at once. "For years and years, now, he has been my stanchest comrade. No matter in what difficulty I found myself, there was always Bryn, and he brought me all his troubles and joys as well. It delights my heart to know that he is happy."

New Customs.

Grandmother looked at Pilar frankly. "You modern girls are so honest and open. In my day a girl would never have dared to make such a statement about a man. She would have been afraid of being misunderstood."

"Misunderstood?" Pilar murmured.

"In my day," Grandmother explained, "there were few young men such as our dear Bryn, so handsome, so eligible in every way, so fine. If a girl had been his friend always, as you have been, my child, then she would have been expected to marry him, and, indeed, she would herself have expected to marry him."

Pilar rose and stood for a moment, tall and lissome and full of grace, beside the door. She was smiling. "Customs are very different now," she murmured, and begged to be excused.

There was a little silence when Pilar was gone. Deborah looked up to find Grandmother stitching away placidly. Sally and Madeline didn't understand. They didn't know what it must have been like for Pilar to love Bryn, to have loved him for years, and then to have him suddenly marry another girl. Deborah's eyes burned, and the bad lump came back in her threat.

She went out and shut the door behind her. As she stepped into the hall . . . the front door was open, and standing in the doorway were Bryn and Pilar. Pilar's arm was thrust through Bryn's, and her cheek was resting on his shoulder. Bryn's hands were deep in his pockets. Deborah couldn't help going on, and wondering if Bryn had often kissed Pilar.

In her mind's eye she could see herself sitting on the wall the other night. She had wanted to take his face between her own two palms and bend down and put her cheek against his forehead. But now she was glad she hadn't done it, because it was Pilar he loved. He had said so.

When she was finished in the kitchen, Deborah went up the back stairs swiftly and into her bedroom. Then she opened the top drawer of her chest, and drew out Bryn's picture. She stood looking at it for a long time, through a kind of blinding mist that wouldn't stay away.

As she went back into her sitting room, someone came lightly along the hall, and she caught her breath lest it should be Bryn. But it was, instead, Pilar.

"Ah, there you are, sweetie," she said. "Where've you been?"

"I was down in the kitchen," Deborah explained, praying that her voice sounded as usual. "Then I came up to get some embroidery. I find myself with no work at all to do these days."

"Don't do embroidery," Pilar said, coming in. "It dates one so."

"I don't mind," Deborah replied. "I don't mind being dated. I can do embroidery quite well."

Pilar laughed. "Next you'll be telling me that you play the 'Maiden's Prayer' on the piano."

"I do," Deborah said promptly.

Pilar was watching her. "You are refreshing," she sighed. "But really, Deborah, you must begin to make some changes in your life. Bryn travels pretty fast, dear."

Deborah sat down slowly. "Hasn't Bryn explained it all to you, Pilar?" she asked at last.

"Explained what?" Pilar asked.

"I know he . . . hasn't told the others. Sally, or Madeline. I don't think even Tubby knows. You know that Bryn couldn't be in love with me," she said.

Pilar did not move. Not by a flicker did her expression change.

"Not in love with you?" she repeated.

"He should have told you. Surely you knew, Pilar?"

"Even if I did," Pilar said softly, "you wouldn't expect me to . . . mention it, Deborah?"

"No," Deborah said after a moment. At Pilar's words her heart had fallen like lead. So Pilar did know. Bryn had told her.

"Bryn, of course, is a gentleman," Pilar said. "He does not tell any more than is necessary."

"No," Deborah said again. "But I can tell you, Pilar."

"I was . . . hoping you would."

"I think I can tell you in just a few words. It was like this: I had to be married by my twenty-first birthday or lose my grandfather's estate. I went down to San Francisco to meet the man I was to marry. He was . . . I couldn't possibly marry him. And Bryn came along by accident, and saw that I was frightened, and I told him about it, and he offered to marry me instead. That's all."

Pilar straightened. "I see," he said. "The day I came, Tubby dragged me away and threatened me with murder if I called Bryn by anything but Graham. The man you were to marry is named Graham?"

"Yes."

"Your grandmother thinks Bryn is the man?"

"Yes."

"And what happens next?"

There was a queer note in her voice, and Deborah looked up quickly. "Nothing," she said. "We have to go on until the end of the year, or I do not get the money. And it must go on for Grandmother's sake, anyway. After that . . . Bryn will be free, then, of course."

"You can not get the money within a year?"

"If the marriage is not successful to that extent," Deborah explained carefully, "I do not get it at all."

"It seems rather a long time out of Bryn's life," she said. "I should think there might have been somebody else, Deborah. Somebody you might have paid for his name and his lost year." After a moment she said, "Of course, it's all very romantic, and you are really quite pretty. Any man would like to be the prince who awakens the sleeping beauty."

Deborah's cheeks crimsoned furiously. "I don't know quite what you are suggesting," she said icily, "but I think you are being insulting."

"Not at all," Pilar replied. "I am merely trying to discover Bryn's reason for this quixotic gesture. Obviously, you are not suited to be a companion to him. You have not the sophistication, the knowledge of his world. You say he does not love you; I think that would be impossible, too. But I think I do begin to see his reason. Beauty in distress . . . and Bryn was always fond of a new adventure. Something new. It is rather an interesting situation, as I must admit."

Striking a Lady Ruins Movie Villains With Women Audiences, and at Box Office

Other Wrongs Are Forgiven By Fair Ones

Cagney's Rights to Jaw Earned Protest; Now He's Reformed.

By Virginia Lee Warren.

THE sight of a man giving a woman a lusty poke in the jaw is pleasurable only to ther men. Women don't care for it.

When bad men of the "kiss 'em nd kick 'em" school slammed and lapped their way across the screens f several Washington theaters a ear or so ago, only men came to watch them. The women, gentle ouls, went on down the street where they could revel in the sight of a siren of the celluloid scorching the hearts of the stronger sex.

Women liké he-villains, yes. But not the ones who yank hair or punch noses as a prelude to caresses. Managers of downtown theaters, almost without exception, are agreed on that point.

As Hardie Meakin, manager of R. K. O.-Keith's, put it yesterday:

"The villain who wants women in his audiences must have the suavity of a diplomat and the parlor manners of Little Lord Fauntleroy. His heart can be black with sin, but his hands must be tender as lilies."

Blondes Tolerate the Brutes.

"Blondes are the only ones who don't mind seeing a man get brutal with women now and then," he added. "In fact, I've noticed blondes actually like a little refined brutality, probably because they're extremely feminine themselves. But even they couldn't take it when Jimmy Cagney used to haul off with his left and plant a resounding smack on some fair maiden's cheek."

Lack of feminine approval for his pugnacious type of love-making undoubtedly made a better man of Cagney, believes C. J. Brennan, manager of the Metropolitan Theater. In his last picture the face-slapping star was comparatively docile.

"And the women liked him," said Mr Brennan. "He had a sympathetic role. Women always get ga-ga over a man in a sympathetic role, even if it's tough old Wally Beery. By the way, Beery has always been a strong woman-draw because he usually plays roles that invokes compassion."

But it's the smooth, handsome lads like William Powell and Warren Williams who can rob banks, foreclose mortgages, wreck the lives of innocent little girls (all on the s en, of course) and still have men raving over their profiles a the way they wear their clothes, ording to the theater managers.

The Immune Heroes.

Herbert Marshall, Robert Montgery, Leslie Howard and Clark ble also belong in this select up of polished villains. If the nario calls upon them to emzle, set fire to orphanages or intain flocks of love nests, the men adore them in spite of these le faults. The reason, according William R. Fischer, manager of Columbia Theater, is that none these actors is ever called upon the movie plot to knock a man down or step in her face.

"George O'Brien is the only ayer of out-and-out roughneck les who gets much feminine reonse," said Mr. Fischer. "That's cause he has a big outdoor man physique. The women get a bang out of him showing a carload of arm muscles. They like to think he could tie the heroine in a knot with only one hand, but that he's so full of gentleness and self-control he does nothing more violent than pat her on the head."

Actors who enjoy portraying big-time gamblers, gangsters and roues have a pretty hard time, the managers agreed. Almost before they know it they are going through the process of reformation.

Audiences Reformed Powell.

"You'd be surprised how many of the screen's bad boys have gone straight at the insistence of women audiences," laughed Mr. Meakin. "Take William Powell. He started out to be one of the slickest villains the films ever had. And no matter what dastardly deed he performed the women thought he was divine. They attended his pictures in such throngs the producers had to make a star out of him. So now he's a hero. Well, he can thank the ladies for the virtuous parts he's playing. Ricardo Cortez was turned from the path of villainy in the same way."

Feminine fans also prefer Clark Gable in gentlemanly roles, according to O. G. Ratto, manager of Loew's Palace.

All the managers said the very same women movie-goers who lift villains to a higher moral plane, keep sirens hard at the business of sirening.

"It's the women who get a thrill out of Garbo and Dietrich," confided the men who run Washington's movie palaces.

"Yes, of course men go to see them," admitted Sol Sorkin, assistant manager of R. K. O.-Keith's. "But men have mighty little to say about the pictures they attend. Their movies are chosen for them by their wives, their girl friends, even their mothers and sisters."

Heroines Made for Women.

Mr. Meakin seconded his assistant's statement.

"The sirens are too exotic for most men," he explained. "Why, Garbo in one of her recent pictures lay down on the floor and ate grapes. Women like that stuff. Men don't."

Kay Francis, poised, urbanely dressed, may not be exotic in comparison with Garbo and Dietrich but she's much too fancy to attract men in large numbers, Fred McMillan, assistant manager of the Earle Theater, has learned.

"The women think Miss Francis is marvelous," said Mr. McMillan. "But she leaves masculine audiences cold."

A vamp built to order for men's tastes is Mae West. Not that men take her seriously, chorused the managers. Oh, my, no. But she entertains them. She makes them feel right at home. They consider her good rowdy fun. Women are also entranced by the elephantine goings-on of La West, according to Everett Steinbuch, manager of Loew's Fox.

"But they regard her more as a clown than as a siren," he said.

The Candy Angels.

What about little candy angels, such as Janet Gaynor?

This type gets its biggest hand from mothers who hope their daughters will continue to believe in Santa Claus and the Easter bunny until they are old enough to vote. At least that's the opinion of Mr. Meakin.

"Some of the older men like Gaynor," he added, "but the college boys want something more sophisticated, something on the order of Joan Crawford."

Mr. Fischer agreed with Mr. Meakin.

"Men aren't any keener about the sunbonnety gals than they are about exotic sirens," he declared. "They like women who are just ordinarily human."

Yes, the managers have it all figured out; what women like and what men prefer in the way of screen villains and sirens. But there's one thing that still puzzles them. They know beyond doubt that women audiences do not care to see other women have their faces slapped. What the managers want to know is this: Is it because women are really so kindly disposed toward all members of their sex? Or is it because each woman in the audiance imagines she is in the heroine's place?

The managers, being men, are inclined toward the latter viewpoint.

Women audiences sat enthralled while Garbo struck this exotic grape-eating pose in a recent film, according to Washington theater managers. But for every woman who was fascinated there was a man in the audience who was bored. Men don't care for that exotic stuff, again according to the managers.

Eye Make-Up Fits New Hats

Touching Up the Lashes Heightens Effect of Rakishness.

By Frances Mangum.

UNDER the new regime of fall hats, eyes are going coquettish. That enormous pancake beret tilted rakishly over one eye exposes the other with flirtatious abandon. The ever-dependable toque reveals both eyes with deceiving ingenuousness. That third type, a cross between the summer cartwheel and the Mae West-ish model, shades the eyes but at the same time shows them to fine advantage.

Here are three entirely different hats all insisting on eye make-up.

Unfortunately eye make-up is harshly judged by many women who fancy it to be nothing less than the art of coating the lids, and beading the lashes.

Premature Refusal.

They see girls who have applied too much mascara and too much shadow, and who have plucked and penciled their brows to fine lines. "If that is eye make-up, we'll have none of it!" they say.

But that isn't eye make-up. Mascara, eye-shadow, and brow pencil, are like rouge, lipstick, and powder. They must be put on carefully and lightly. To show to best advantage they must scarcely show at all. That is first thing to remember.

The mascara, for instance, has a magic way of making the lashes look darker and longer if applied sparingly with a clean brush.

Touching Up.

The upper lashes should be gone over twice, the lower ones but once, and in both instances the emphasis should be placed on the lashes in the outer corner of the eyes. After the mascara use another brush to apply a tiny bit of lash cream, or even castor oil. This gives the lashes a silky, natural look.

The proper application of eye shadow requires practice. It is only the amateur who will daub it thickly. A tiny line immediately above the lashes, blended slightly upward and outward gives that mysterious and alluring shadow effect so desired by women of all ages.

If nature has given a woman adequate brows, the pencil may not be needed. If it is needed, one should be chosen which suits the natural color of the brows. After it has been traced very lightly it should always be brushed over so that no artificial line shows.

Grecian Scanties Remarkable Only for Their Distinct Lack

Roman Ladies, Too—Even the Most Respectable of Them—Ignored Any Form of These Underthings as Though They Had Never Been.

Scanties in Greece and Rome were so scant there weren't any. What the smartly dressed ladies of the day wore in place of them is related in this, the second of a series of articles on underthings.

By Irene Hasbrook.

WHEN Greece was glorious, Rome was grand, when classical civilization was at its height, the history of scanties was at its lowest ebb. So low that these garments as moderns know them were nonexistent.

Ancient India having given the original impetus to the now centuries old fad, the feminine inhabitant of the Aegean Islands having contributed their ideas to what scanties should be, Greece and Rome abandon these feminine accessories completely. Nothing remotely resembling panties in any form were worn by classical fashionables.

The Naughty Classicals.

Twentieth century censors, the self-appointed kind, have howled their wrath against the prevalent undress of today's young things. The lack of undergarments of the noble Roman and Grecian matrons might have disturbed them more. For these ladies, no matter how well draped they seem as portrayed in statues, were distinctly casual as far as amount and modesty of their "unmentionables" are concerned.

The chic Grecian wore around her waist a zona, a sort of woolen sash or girdle, and an apodesm, another woolen band something on the idea of today's brassiere. And there she was, as far as underthings were concerned.

Imperial Rome offered little more quantity in underwear, but considerably more elaborateness. Woman's status under the Caesars accomplished the change; women's status and the different way of life. Women in the great days of Greece—respectable wives and daughters, that is—were stay-at-homes. Theirs was not to mingle in society, but to focus attention on the domestic arts.

Life and Scanties Speed Up.

Imperial Rome, however, did not regard things in such a light. No matter how gentle a lady, she snatched her share of whatever gaiety was going on. Society suddenly became "fast," and so did the Roman matron. Underthings took the cue.

Fabrics are far more luxurious than in Greece. Color comes into undergarments. The Greek apodesm becomes the strophia and turns purple and other bright hues. Aside from the strophia, Roman ladies wore a tunic of which there is no adequate description, but which is known to have been scant, no matter what else it was or was not.

The depression in scanties continues throughout the Middle Ages, but other underthings rise to substitute. Read about them in tomorrow's Post.

Small Talk's Home Made In the Cafes

New York, Spet, 3 (AP).—Sidewalk cafes have transplanted an old village custom—gossiping—to Manhattan's bustling streets this summer.

There aren't any cracker barrels, sawdust-filled boxes or hitching rails, but the purpose—conversation—hasn't changed a bit.

Lower Fifth avenue, traditional center for authors, has a cluster of these bright haunts where small talk may ebb and flow unhampered.

The Brevoort's pale green tables and chairs, over which hover 40 French waiters, extend almost to the doorstep of Mark Twain's old, red-brick home, now an apartment house.

There one may find any of of a dozen authors, passing literary chit-chat, a hum of animated conversation in several languages.

"Somebody always shows up," said Lucien Carey. "It's a charming custom, this business of watching life from the sidewalks. I'd like to see more of this leisurely sort of living."

Sidewalks on the rim of the theatrical district, along Central Park South, are studded with cafes, with actors and the drama in the conversational spotlight.

"He lives there," said Chick Marx of another actor, pointing to a table nearby, as he bantered with fellow artists in a cafe in this section.

At night the clubs and restaurants of Broadway beckon. Daytime it's the sidewalk cafes. Sophisticated city folk indulge in such bucolic pleasure as watching the sunset over Manhattan skyscraper heights, and commenting upon the efficiency with which a laborer in Central Park, across busy Fifty-ninth street, mows the lawn.

Park avenue has its own select haunts, sheltered from prying eyes by high lattice fences and striped canvas roofs. In these cafes is a studied diginty absent elsewhere.

The Yorkville sector has its beer gardens, where beaming Germans and their wives sip from great mugs and join in song fests, led usually by a violinist and pianist.

Perhaps the most amusing gesture in this rush to the sidewalks was that of a 10-cent hamburger stand proprietor. He, too, set up outdoor tables for his customers.

Jealousy and Envy a Chief Cause of Child Nervousness

Parents Urged to Exhibit Equal Amount of Love to Their Offspring to Prevent a Warped and Bitter Outlook on Life.

JEALOUSY is one of the greatest causes of maladjustment and nervous disorders among children.

"And parents who want their children to grow into well-rounded, normal individuals must be careful to see there is never any just cause for jealousy in the home," says Dr. Benjamin Karpman, psychiatrist at St. Elizabeths Hospita.

"It is impossible to overestimate the overwhelming role jealousy plays in causing many nervous breakdowns," he says. "Jealousy develops in persons who have not found satisfaction in love. And parents who can bestow equal attention upon all their children and keep them happy are real artists. But this must be done if children are to have a healthy mental and emotional life."

Dr. Karpman warns parents not to show partiality to any one child, and not to hold one child up as a model to the others. Often, he points, defiant children who baffle their parents, teachers and the family physician are consumed with jealousy and envy.

Contrary to the general belief, Dr. Karpman says, children born of normal parents do not always grow into normal men and women.

"This is because parents fail to realize that social heredity is just as important as physical heredity," he points out. "They make the mistake of thinking the child will naturally develop mentally and emotionally, if he is well-fed. This is not true. Mental hygiene is necessary in this fast moving age. Children should have a happy, harmonious environment.

"They should never be punished if it can be avoided. And certainly they should never be whipped. The ideal procedure in correcting a child's faults is to convince him his conduct is anti-social, and entrust to him the right of self-punishment. Repentance and frank confession of the wrong should be considered adequate penalty. Parents and teachers alike must realize that only love can educate."

If parents wish their children to grow into well-rounded human beings they must first of all be at peace with themselves, Dr. Karpman concludes.

Doctor Spurs Hunt for Fiend Who Slew Girls

Insists Young Sisters Were Attacked Before Locked in Ice Box to Die.

Sacramento, Calif., Sept. 3 (AP). Insistence of the autopsy surgeon that Mary Paiva, 6, and her sister, Maryann, 7, had been criminally attacked before they died, locked in their family's icebox, kept sheriff's officers searching today for a possible assailant.

The bodies of the girls were found in the icebox when members of the family returned from picking hops late Friday.

Food taken from the refrigerator and placed on a nearby table and an inverted coffee can on the floor before the icebox gave grounds for the conclusion the children, disobeying their mother, had chosen the shiny new metal cabinet as their playground.

Authorities first accepted the accident theory, but when County Physician C. H. McDonnell insisted they had been criminally attacked the sheriff's office began searching for potential suspects.

"My examination shows absolutely that both girls had been abused prior to their deaths," the doctor said, "I am confident their injuries, by the very nature of them, could not have been self-inflicted while they threshed about in the icebox."

The doctor said the girls died of suffocation.

How to Keep Well

Felons.

We are always seeking for the rare and unusual. Many of us perhaps would prefer to read a description of some bizarre and rare disease that has been discovered in an individual living in a hut at the foot of Khyber Pass.

Felons are so common that they are infrequently described, and too little practical information is available about them. The end of the finger possesses a peculiar anatomical structure that constitutes a closed sac. A felon is infection within this area. Because pus can not escape from this space and because the blood supply is shut off when pressure incident to swelling develops, bone destruction is imminent.

The common felon is a cause of much loss of time, and sometimes a crippling deformity may result. The English call felons "whitlows," indicating a suppurating inflammation of the finger, most commonly affecting the terminal, or last joint.

Wherever bacteria penetrate the skin covering the terminal finger joint a felon may result. This may occur through a slight wound, such as a pin-prick, that is scarcely noted at the moment. Furthermore, the skin, naturally elastic, frequently closes the opening of the wound, preventing drainage and sealing in poisonous material. Neglected skin infections may burrow into the deeper tissues.

The principal symptom occasioned by a deep infection is pain—stabbing in character, later becoming throbbing. The patient is unable to rest, and the last two or three joints of the finger become red and swollen. The diagnosis is made on redness, swelling, pain and tenderness of the terminal joint of the infected finger.

If antiseptics were promptly applied to the site of injuries in every case there would be but few skin infections, few felons and few cases of so-called blood poisoning. Many factories keep on hand some such simple and convenient antiseptic as tincture of iodine, and striking statistics have been published from certain industrial concerns proving the marked reduction in hand infections due to the prompt use of some such solution.

As a rule, after cleansing, the site of the infection should be covered with a piece of sterile gauze. In spite of this treatment some bacteria may have penetrated beyond the reach of the antiseptic. If another simple procedure were regularly practiced, namely, soaking the infected area in hot water for an hour at a time several times daily, deep infections such as felons, and even more serious blood stream infections would be still further reduced.

If the tissue underneath has been involved to any great extent the treatment consists of incision into the abscess and drainage of the accumulated pus. Care should be taken not to make the incision until it is certain pus is present. The trained surgeon will open the abscess in such a way that the sense of touch is not destroyed. Early and skilled attention will prevent bone destruction and avoid the necessity of amputation. Occasionally osteomyelitis, that is, inflammation of the bone itself with bone destruction, occurs. This is rare unless infection has been allowed to continue too long.

Modern surgery owes much to the research of Allen Kanavel, who has brought the management of finger and hand infections to a high degree of perfection.

Pulmotors.

R. C. writes: 1. Can a man be found on the bottom of 10 feet of water and be brought back to life after lying on the bottom for three hours?

2. When the pulmotor squad is called to a drowning and the victim is still unconscious, can the life guard tell them to go back where they came from?

3. What is the best method of respiration—artificial or with a respirator?

Reply.

1. No.

2. Some one who is competent, a physician preferably, should determine whether the heart is still beating or can be caused to beat through the direct injection of adrenalin. If the victim is dead there is no advantage in using a pulmotor.

3. Artificial respirators are sometimes of great value, although the Sylvester or the Schaefer method of respiration in most cases is adequate.

THE CAIMAN LOOKS LIKE A CROCODILE OR AN ALLIGATOR... ... BUT IS NEITHER!
9-4-34 McNaught Syndicate, Inc., N. Y.

In recent years metal has found many novel uses. In copper mining districts thin sheets of copper are used for business cards, stationery and show cards. But strange as it seems, the use of metal as a substitute for paper goes back more than 80 years to 1852, when a book "The Working Serf" was handprinted on thin sheets of metal bound between hinged iron plates.

• • • •

The caiman is the third generally unknown member of the crocodile-like reptiles. Alligators and crocodiles are well known to everyone; few know there is such a thing as a caiman. The so-called South American alligators are really caimans. There are five species of them.

• • • •

The highest bridge in the world is the Royal Gorge Bridge across the Arkansas River in Colorado, about 100 miles southwest of Denver. Strange as it seems, the bridge is longer than it is high. Thousands of tourists who pass over it every season marvel at the depth of the gorge, never suspecting that the ends of the bridge are separated by a greater distance than the height of the roadway over the river.

The Royal Gorge Bridge is 1,050 feet above the river. It is 1,260 feet long. The main span covers 800 feet.

A Bridge Souvenir.

Practically every Bridge player treasures in his memory a few thrilling hands which he played so well and of which he was so proud that the impression they have made upon him can never be effaced. Forever after, when in the course of an evening's Bridge he suffers a temporary lapse and commits some horrible error in bidding or play, he can salve his lacerated vanity with a brief mental review of his pristine brilliancies.

Being a Bridge player, I have my own prized collection of Bridge souvenirs, and when I found it expedient last night to pick one out and fondle it I chanced upon one which has remained heretofore unrecorded. It happened years ago in a Duplicate game. My partner did not notice it, nor did my opponents. The innate modesty and self-effacement for which I am famous caused me to refrain from pointing out what I had done; and as no one asked me to explain, the hand was soon forgotten. Now here it is resurrected:

South, Dealer.
East-West vulnerable.

	♠ A 6 ♡ 8 6 4 3 ◇ Q 9 7 ♣ 10 7 5 2
♠ 4 2 ♡ J 9 7 2 ◇ 6 5 3 ♣ A K 9 4		♠ Q 7 5 3 ♡ Q 10 5 ◇ A 8 4 ♣ J 6 3
	♠ K J 10 9 8 ♡ A K ◇ K J 10 2 ♣ Q 8

The bidding:

South	West	North	East
1♠	Pass	1NT	Pass
3♠	Pass	4♠	Pass
Pass	Pass

I was South, and I am willing to admit that my Jump rebid of three spades was stretched a trifle. My partner likewise was somewhat forward in raising me to four with only a doubleton in trumps and (so far as he knew) nothing else of value. Nevertheless, we arrived at four spades and then it was up to me to make it.

West opened the club King, and then led the six of diamonds. On this East played the Ace and I dropped the Ten. East returned the six of clubs, and West, after winning my Queen with his Ace, led the deuce of hearts, whereupon I was in with the King.

At this point it would appear from my point of view that the success of my contract would depend upon avoiding the loss of a spade trick. I had lost three tricks, and except for the trump suit every card in my hand was high. But before proceeding to play out the spades I paused to consider two possibilities.

First, East had seemed very anxious after winning with his Ace of Diamonds, to get the club trick in. It seemed very unlikely that the diamond Queen in Dummy might furnish me a discard, but East had not taken any chances.

This was some indication that East must be fairly sure of winning the setting trick and he could not be sure unless he not only held the spade Queen, but held it so well guarded that he would have been able to withstand a finesse. Another thing which occurred to me was that West probably had four clubs and, having shown four hearts by his lead of the deuce, was very likely to be short in spades.

In case East had four spades the hand could not be made by merely finessing. In any case, I thought I would try to find out something about the club distribution. So I led the Jack of diamonds and overtook it with Dummy's Queen. Next I led the club seven from Dummy and East's Jack fell, whereupon I ruffed with the spade eight. After cashing the Ace of hearts I led the diamond deuce which I had so carefully saved, and the diamond nine furnished a much needed entry to Dummy. The next lead from Dummy was the club ten, and East was powerless. If he discarded his last heart, I would discard the diamond King. I would then ruff a heart, topping any spade East might play, and re-enter Dummy by means of the spade Ace to take a final finesse for the last two tricks.

If on the lead of the club Ten East ruffed, I would simply overruff, go over to the spade Ace, finesse for the Queen, lead out the last trump with my King and cash the King of Diamonds. By no play could East prevent me from making the four spade contract.

East chose to ruff the club, whereupon the play proceeded as I have described it. The final result could not have been achieved by any other line of play, but East only shook his head wearily and observed that he probably shouldn't have trumped the club.

Tomorrow's Hand.

North, Dealer.
Neither side vulnerable.

	♠ A 6 ♡ 10 ◇ A Q 9 8 7 5 2 ♣ A 7 3
♠ J 10 8 7 5 ♡ Q 8 4 2 ◇ — ♣ K J 10 2		♠ — ♡ A K J 9 7 6 5 ◇ K J 6 ♣ Q 6 4
	♠ K Q 9 4 3 2 ♡ 3 ◇ 10 4 2 ♣ 9 8 5

This hand will be discussed in tomorrow's article.

NEED MORE ENERGY?

Get a LIFT with a Camel!

FROM LONG KEY TO NOVA SCOTIA, the famous sportsman and writer, REX BEACH, has matched his skill and vitality against the big game fish of the Atlantic! Sailfish... marlin...tuna—he's caught them all! Below he tells how he lights a Camel after fighting it out with a heavy fish—and soon "feels as good as new!" And Camel smokers in every walk of life agree with Mr. Beach about smoking Camels to increase energy.

PHONE OPERATOR. Miss Marion Erickson says: "I smoke a lot! I enjoy a Camel every time I can catch a minute away from the board. Since I changed to Camels, I find I never have to think about nerves. And Camels are so mild and taste so good, too!"

RODEO CHAMPION. Eddie Woods says: "Believe me, I'm plenty tired at the end of a tough contest. And boy, does a Camel taste good when your energy is low! A Camel chases away that 'all in' feeling and in a few minutes I'm ready for the next event. Furthermore, I find that Camels don't upset the nerves."

SALESMAN. Kenneth B. Logan says: "The selling game calls for healthy nerves. Meeting people all day long...trying to turn prospects into customers...certainly tell on nerves. I smoke most of the time—but I smoke only Camels, and I'll tell you why! Camels don't upset my nerves—and no cigarette can match Camels on flavor, either."

OLYMPIC SWIMMER. Miss Helene Madison, who has broken 19 Olympic and world's records in swimming, says: "I've been smoking Camels a long time. I can definitely say that they don't interfere with my nerves ...I enjoy Camels' mildness and they give me a refreshing 'lift' in energy when I feel tired out!"

REX BEACH TELLS YOU
how to get back vim and energy when "Played Out!"

"I have taken my share of big sailfish, marlin, and tuna," says Rex Beach. "I know what a rod-and-reel contest with these heavy fighters does to a man's vitality. When I've gotten a big fellow safely landed my next move is to light a Camel, and I feel as good as new. A Camel quickly gives me a sense of well-being and renewed energy. As a steady smoker, I have also learned that Camels do not interfere with healthy nerves."

Thousands of smokers will recognize from their own experience just what Mr. Beach means when he says that he lights a Camel when tired and "feels as good as new." And science adds confirmation of this refreshing "energizing effect."

That's why you hear people say so often: "Get a lift with a Camel." Camels aren't flat or "sweetish." Their flavor never disappoints. You can smoke Camels steadily—as many as you want—their finer, MORE EXPENSIVE TOBACCOS do not get on the nerves!

TOBACCO EXPERTS ALL SAY:
"Camels are made from finer, More Expensive Tobaccos—Turkish and Domestic—than any other popular brand."

Camel's Costlier Tobaccos never get on your Nerves!

McLarnin-Ross Gate of $100,000 Seen on Thursday.

Champion Rules Slight Favorite to Beat Irishman.

NEW YORK, Sept 3 (AP).—Barney Ross broke camp today at Ferndale after a brisk boxing drill and moved bag and baggage to New York to finish preparations for the defense of the world welterweight championship in a return 15-round match with Jimmy McLarnin on Thursday night in Madison Square Garden Bowl.

McLarnin meanwhile completed his public training at Orangeburg, but the clouting Celt plans to remain at his camp until Wednesday night or Thursday morning.

Both fighters have impressed critics as being in remarkably good condition, with little to choose as to their respective chances. Ross so far has been a slight favorite in the betting but McLarnin has many supporters in his bid to turn the tables on the black-haired Chicago boy.

$100,000 Gate Seen.

Despite prospects of a brilliant battle, the ticket sale has lagged. It may not draw much more than $100,000, unless there is a rapid pickup.

Ross scaled 138¼ pounds after his final workout at camp and probably will enter the ring six or seven pounds lighter than his rival. His boxing skill, in two brief rounds with Phil Rafferty and Al Cassamini this afternoon, impressed observers. Barney's first manager, Gig Rooney, predicted his former protege would score an easy victory over McLarnin.

Ross will work out at Stillman's gymnasium here tomorrow and Wednesday to keep on edge.

McLarnin Jars Mate.

McLarnin buckled the knees of his sparring mate, Calvin Reed, Philadelphia Negro, at the outset of a four-round boxing session and demonstrated to a crowd of 1,000 onlookers that his right hand still packs plenty of dynamite. The Irishman will don the gloves for the last time tomorrow, according to Manager Pop Foster.

Pirates Pound Deans, Take Twin Bill

PITTSBURGH, Sept. 3 (AP).—Beating each of the Dean Brothers in a Labor Day double-header, the Pittsburgh Pirates dealt two hard blows to the pennant aspirations of St. Louis Cardinals today before 20,000 fans.

Paul Dean was first to feel the might of the Corsairs' bats, being chased in an eight-run, third inning uprising of the first game, which Pittsburgh won, 12 to 2.

Brother Jerome was charged with the 6-5 defeat in the nightcap, although he hurled to only four batters. Rushed into the game after the Redbirds had suddenly driven the veteran Hoyt to cover with a three run ninth inning rally that put them in the lead, 5-3, "Dizzy" retired the first batter.

Bob Tow to Seek Dempsey as Pilot

Robert Lee May, Alexandria bus magnate who controls the fistic destiny of Heavyweight Bob Tow as a sideline, will seek today to place his protege under the managerial wing of Jack Dempsey. May, with Tow in tow, just missed the old Man Mauler last night as he slipped away from the dinner table, but did succeed in getting an appointment to talk the matter over today.

Tow boxed masterfully his last time out, to take a disputed decision from Tony Galento, a Dempsey-managed fighter who meets Marty Gallagher in the 15-round feature of the police benefit card at Griffith Stadium tonight. Just 24 years of age, standing more than 6 feet and weighing close to 200 pounds, the Alexandria Adonis generally is considered one of the brightest heavyweight prospects in the South.

Don Elder, Auto Race Driver, Dies in Crash

Sharon, Pa., Sept. 3 (AP).—Don Elder, 29, of Warren, Ohio, automobile racer, was killed today during a qualifying trial for the Labor Day races at the Sharon Legion speedway, his car hurtling over an embarkment and turning over three times.

Elder was a veteran of dirt track racing, having participated for five years. His wife was in the crowd and witnessed the accident. She said her husband had promised her to quit for the year after the race.

The racing program was postponed as a result, until next Sunday.

Elder was driving an automobile owned by "Whizz" Sloan, of Akron.

World's Record Is Broken by Discovery

Sets 1 3-16 Mark, Taking Feature Race as Narragansett Meet Ends.

PAWTUCKET, R. I., Sept. 3 (AP). Smashing the world's record for 1 3-16 miles, Alfred G. Vanderbilt's Discovery, badly beaten at Rockingham Park Saturday, came back today to win the $15,000 Rhode Island Handicap before a crowd of 40,000 at the closing of Narragansett Park's first meeting.

The chestnut son of Display, a champion when not matched against the 3-year-old titleholder, Cavalcade, whirled over a lightning fast track in 1:55 under 119 pounds.

Sir Barton Mark Falls.

The time was three-fifths of a second faster than the old world's mark established by the famous Sir Barton at Saratoga in 1920.

With Johnny Bejshak in the saddle, Discovery jumped to the front soon after the start under strong restraint. He was rated well by his veteran rider and when given the word at the head of the stretch opened up to finish two lengths in front of the well-regarded Hadagal from Warren Wright's Calumet Farm. Mrs. Dodge Sloane's Good Goods was another two and a half lengths back, showing the way home to Mrs. W. P. Stewart's Lady Reigh, D. A. Woods' Indian Runner and C. V. Whitney's Collateral.

Strictly Two-Horse Race.

The race for the purse of $11,200 was strictly a two-horse affair from the rise of the barrier with Eddie Arcara striving to keep Hadagal within striking distance of the fleeting chestnut. But it was not to be done today, for the horse that trailed Cavalcade in six rich 3-year-old stakes never was better. He fought for his head from the start and probably could have clipped another fifth of a second off the record if he had been pushed.

Despite his poor effort at Rockingham, Discovery was the even money choice.

Five Seeded Stars Advance In U. S. Title Tennis Tourney

By Bob Cavagnaro.

FOREST HILLS, N. Y. Sept. 3 (AP).—A heavy downpour of rain today halted play in the second round of the Men's National singles championship, with the result that only 7 of the 32 matches on the tennis program were completed.

Officials of the United States Lawn Tennis Association announced that the final would be held on Sunday, instead of Saturday, as a result of the schedule setback. The weather forecast was for steady rain tonight and raised doubt the second round could be completed tomorrow.

Two Advance by Default.

Five seeded domestic stars were among the seven players who gained the third round. They were Sidney B. Wood, jr., Gregory Mangin, George M. Lott, jr., Frankie Parker and Berkeley Bell. Parker and Bell advanced by default of Edward W. Burns and Donald M. Frame, respectively. Burns withdrew because of his wife's death.

Lott, Mangin and Wood scored in straight sets. Lott took over Ernest Sutter, of New Orleans, 6—3, 7—5, 6—3; Wood overpowered S. Ellsworth Davenport 3d, of Forest Hills, 6—2, 6—4, 6—4, and Mangin conquered Ralph de Mott, of Woodcliff, N. J., 6—3, 6—1, 6—3.

Robert Bryan Wins.

In the other completed matches, Robert Bryan, of Chattanooga, Tenn., defeated Bernard Friedman, of Philadelphia, 6—3, 6—1, 6—3; Yelverton Garnett, of Southampton, N. Y., conquered William Thompson, of Brooklyn, 6—1, 6—4, 6—3; Gene Mako, of Los Angeles, vanquished J. Gilbert Hall, of South Orange, N. J., 3—6, 6—1, 6—1, 6—3, and Robert L. Stanford, of Glendale, Calif., accounted for Adolpho de Menezes, of Brazil, in straight sets at love.

Roderick Menzel, the towering Czechoslovakian, had a lead of two sets to one over Roland Longtin, of

Dr. Baldwin Wins Archery Crown

Baltimore, Sept. 3 (AP).—Dr. John C. Baldwin, of Baltimore, champion Maryland archer, captured the Old Dominion Archery Association title today.

The association title is tantamount to the championship of the region comprising Maryland, Virginia, West Virginia and the District of Columbia. Next year's tournament will be held in Washington. Dr. Baldwin scored a total of 617 points in the double American round, shot by male contestants in the second day of the competition.

Mrs. Josephine Taylor, of Washington, the defending women's champion, kept her title by shooting a double Columbia round and piling up a score of 448 points to lead her nearest competitor by more than 300 points.

W. O. Robinson, of Washington, ranked fifth yesterday, climbed to second place with a score of 541 in the double American round.

Indians Take 2 From Browns, 9-5 and 6-4

St. Louis, Sept. 3 (AP).—The Cleveland Indians knocked George Blaeholder out of the box with seven runs in the first inning and defeated the St. Louis Browns, 9 to 5, in the first game of a Labor Day doubleheader. Three errors gave Cleveland 5 of the first 7 runs, and Monte Pearson, Indians' pitcher, accounted for 2 more with a home run. The Tribe also took the second game, 6 to 4.

Gomez Victor; Yankees, A's Split Bill

Hurler Wins 10th in Row in First, 11-7; Foxx Hits 40th in 2d.

NEW YORK, Sept. 3 (AP).—With the aid of some very lusty clubbing on the part of his teammates, Vernon (Lefty) Gomez, Yankees' southpaw ace and the major leagues' leading hurler, won his tenth straight and his twenty-fourth game of the season as New York and the Philadelphia Athletics split even in today's double-header, played in threatening weather before a crowd of 30,000. The Yanks won the opening contest, 11 to 7, and the A's took the nightcap, 10 to 3.

Gomez, hurling the first game, was touched for five runs on three hits and as many bases on balls in the second inning, but he steadied and held the Athletics to two runs during the remainder of the game. Meanwhile, the Yankees gradually pecked away at Bill Dietrich, after Babe Ruth had hit his twenty-first home run of the season in the first inning.

Score Four in Eighth.

The New Yorkers scored three more runs in the third, added another group of three in the sixth to go out in front and then staged a four-run rampage in the eighth to put the game on ice.

Jimmy Foxx, hitting his fortieth home run of the season, Roger Cramer and Bob Johnson drove in nine of the Athletics' runs off Johnny Broaca, Charley Ruffing and Johnny Allen in the second contest. Merritt (Sugar) Cain went the route for Philadelphia, keeping the Yanks' 10 hits well scattered, except in the third and ninth, when

Police Fights Intact for Tonight

THE police benefit boxing card scheduled for Griffith Stadium last night was drizzled out and will be presented at the ball yard at 8 o'clock tonight with Tony Galento making passes at Marty Gallagher and Jack Dempsey refereeing, exactly as originally planned.

The steady rain throughout Labor Day failed to dampen the ardor of the Phineas F. Phightphans, who flocked to the various ticket offices throughout the city to purchase ducats to the monstrous program of 49 rounds. At a late hour, following the ticket rush, officials were more confident than ever in their predictions that the card would attract a record gate of more than 25,000.

The postponement was decided upon shortly after 6 p. m., after officials had debated pro and con throughout the murky day. Jack Dempsey, who was scheduled to referee the semifinal, readily agreed to remain in town until tomorrow to carry out his part of the program, allowing the police officials to present the card as scheduled.

Washington's Lead Cut in Finale by 2 Runs in 8th Inning.

By Lewis F. Atchison.

JOE CRONIN is out for the rest of the season. The Nats' pilot suffered a fractured arm in the first game of yetserday's doubleheader with the Red Sox, the last of the regulars to come under the spell of the jinx that has dogged the team all season.

Cronin was left behind as the club departed on its final invasion of the West, nursing a fractured radius bone in his left forearm. The club's physician said last night that it will be several days before Cronin can rejoin the team and that it will be out of the question for him to play again in 1934. Al Schacht will be in charge of the team during Cronin's absence.

The Nat pilot was injured during a rally in the eighth inning of the first game which fell far short of overtaking the Sox, who eventually won by a score of 6 to 3. He collided with Wes Ferrell, Sox pitcher, running out a hit down the first base line. Ferrell went over to cover the bag, taking the throw from Ben Morgan.

Cronin turned several somersaults and came up clinging to his injured arm. He finished the game after receiving first-aid, but did not participate in the finale, which ended in a 4-4 stalemate and was called at the end of the eighth inning because of rain and darkness.

Cronin was fifth up in that fateful eighth. Kerr grounded out, but McColl drilled a single to center and Bluege was safe on Werber's poor throw to first. McColl scored and Bluege went to third on Stone's single, and Cronin followed with his drive to first, Bluege scoring. Joe was forced at second by Manush and Bolton popped up, ending the two-run rally.

Wes Ferrell, the reformed Cleveland bad man, was not particularly hard pressed by the Nats. He pitched only seven hits to our side and came within two innings of a shutout. Schulte's ninth-inning triple, followed by Susko's first and only single of the match, gave the Nats their third run.

Tally Is Scored.

It was Monte Weaver's first lacing in 12 starts against the Bostonians, but from the very outset it was ap-

Brewers Hold Coil-Cleaning Is Essential for Good Beer

Alexander Bell, brewer's attorney, quoted in Washington Star, says:

"I've been identified with the beer business for 50 years, and when beer came back I began observing practices which are not conducive to proper beer handling. Not only is the quality of the product itself impaired by improperly cleaned coils, but if the coils are too completely neglected, they can become a real menace to health."

DRAUGHT BEER SERVED AT THE OLMSTED GRILL IS CLEAN, PURE AND WHOLESOME. We don't use coils to cool our beer. Our beer is cooled in the keg and drawn directly from the keg into the glass. Quality has been my standard for more than a quarter of a century.

Sation, 9-1 Shot, Wins by Head Before 35,000 in Rockingham's $7,500 Handicap

Time Supply 2d in Fast Sprint

Widener Star, Idle for Year, Capably Ridden by Jockey Hunter.

SALEM, N. H., Sept. 3 (AP).—Making his first start in nearly a year, George D. Widener's Sation reeled off 6 furlongs in the fast time of 1:10 2-5 today to win the $7,500 Labor Day Handicap before a crowd of 35,000 at Rockingham Park.

Quoted at 9 to 1 in the mutuels, the 4-year-old gelding, which won 7 of his 13 starts in 1933, opened up an early lead and then held on gamely to score a head decision over Mrs. F. A. Carreaud's Time Supply, the 3-year-old champion of the Florida season. C. V. Whitney's High Glee, winner of the Narragansett feature on Saturday, was third, losing the place by three lengths.

Near Track Record.

Sation, carrying the top weight of 126 pounds together with the favorite, Ajaccio, from the Sanford Stud Farm, came within one-fifth of a second of equaling the track record in earning the purse of $5,790 and paying his backers $20.20 for $2. Ajaccio, held at 5 to 2, was in the running at the head of the stretch, but weakened and finished eighth in the field of 11.

Jimmy Hunter made use of Sation's high speed. He shot the gelding through on the inside and opened up a lead of 1½ lengths at the quarter pole. Then taking the Widener horse under restraint, Hunter saved something for the final dash, and it was well he did, for Tommy Luther brought Time Supply, which was making his first start since June 20, up fast and all but caught Sation in the final strides.

20,000 at Belmont.

Belmont Park Race Track, Sept. 3 (AP).—A holiday crowd estimated at close to 20,000 disregarded rainy weather to welcome the thoroughbreds back to Long Island and to see Victor Emanuel's filly Miss Merriment register an imposing victory in the featured Fall Highweight Handicap today. Although unused to carrying anything like 119 pounds, the 3-year-old daughter of High Time—Nobility easily led home seven other crack sprinters, beating William Graham's Kievex by three lengths. The latter lasted to save the place by a half length from the fast-closing Halcyon, from C. V. Whitney's barn.

Regan Pigeon Winner By 7-Seconds Margin

Checkmate, a pigeon from the loft of W. F. Regan, won the second 100-mile race of the Washington Pigeon Combine from Cumberland, Md., yesterday. The winning bird made a speed of 1,108.10 yards per minute, beating the loft of Nitzey & Reinhard by 7 seconds.

Thirty-five lofts sent 403 birds to the race, the first seven winning diplomas.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—EARLY DAWN, $8.00, $4.10, $3.50; PROSECUTOR, $3.70, $3.20; BON MOT, $5.10.

EARLY DAWN, away well, was allowed to settle into her best stride, moved up gamely leaving the back stretch, slipped through on the inside through the stretch, and, closing gamely when called upon, wore down the leaders. PROSECUTOR forced the pace, assumed a brief lead in the stretch, but could not stall off the closing challenge of the winner. BON MOT, restrained early after gaining a prominent position on the outside, and closed gamely. RIVER ROSE, a forward factor all the way, held on well, but could not improve her position. YANKEE PRINCE had good speed and, under intermittent punishment after leaving the back stretch, faltered badly in the final furlong. CHARLIE DAWN, far back throughout, showed a dull effort.

THIRD RACE—Five and one-half furlongs. Purse, $800; claiming. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good. Won driving; place same. Went to post at 3:46. Off at 3:50. Winner, J. D. Mikel's br. f. Two-dollar mutuels paid—MACADAM, $10.60, $5.30, $4.00; MORHEART, $23.20, $10.50; PAPER PROFITS, $4.10.

MACADAM followed in closest pursuit of the pace, moved up gamely under hard urging and wore down MORHEART in the concluding strides. MORHEART, away fast, drew clear rounding the far turn, was placed under punishment through the stretch and just failed. PAPER PROFITS, under strong urging, was close up, but lacked the necessary finishing drive. DORNOCH worked his way up steadily and closed with a rush through the last furlong. UPPERCUT, outrun early, obtained clear sailing on the inside leaving the back stretch and loomed up threateningly at the stretch turn, but could not improve his position under punishment. LAMPORTE went well placed until rearing the stretch, where he started to drop back. CANCEL was unable to reach the leaders. HASTY BELLE and LIBERTY OAK were outrun.

FOURTH RACE—Five furlongs; purse, $1,000; claiming. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good. Won handily; place driving. Went to post at 4:25. Off at 4:27½. Winner, Mrs. R. T. Flippen's b. f. Two-dollar mutuels paid—BRIGHT BIRD, $10.80, $6.30, $4.60. DONT BLUSH, $20.20, $8.70; REIGH ROSE, $4.70.

BRIGHT BIRD, restrained for the first half mile, moved up steadily thereafter, came to the outside in the stretch and, closing with a will in th center of the track was up in the last stride. DONT BLUSH, a trailer for the first half mile, moved up gradually, came between the field in the stretch and closed with good energy. REIGH ROSE took command at once was hustled clear of her field, was taken back and given a breathing spell when BATTLING KNIGHT challenged, again went into the lead in the stretch, but was unable to cope with the bids of the first two. BATTLING KNIGHT, well placed all the way, weakened. FINNIC, under restraint early, moved up after leaving the back stretch, but weakened. TWIDGETTS suffered interference.

EIGHTH RACE—One mile. Purse, $800; claiming. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good. Won driving; place same. Went to post at 6:41. Off at 6:45. Winner, L. T. Whitehill's b. g. (4), by Hapf—Ara. Two-dollar mutuels paid—RHODIUS, $8.50, $5.30, $4.00; HOW HIGH, $11.10, $5.90; CHIMNEY TOP, $4.40.

RHODIUS, away well, was under restraint until approaching the far turn, where he made his move and gradually improved his position until, in the end of the stretch, he had gained command, and was hard ridden at the end to hold HOW HIGH safe. HOW HIGH moved up steadily in the last half mile and, kept under intermittent punishment, was gaining slowly at the end. CHIMNEY TOP had good speed but, much used in racing with QUICK STEP, had nothing left when the leaders challenged. LAST BID went well placed, was brought to the outside in the stretch, but was unable to improve her position. HASTY PETER, well up, had no excuses. CALOME never could enter into serious contention. QUICK STEP had good speed for a half mile, but stopped badly and pulled up lame.

Dear Al: Rockingham Park, Sept. 3.

Cy Cummings, of Laurel; Matt Daiger, of Pimlico, and Tom Lynch, of Bowie, would have turned green with envy had they been here today to see the customers jam every available bit of space in and around this race track. The so-called experts estimated the crowd at 35,000, and they weren't looking through thick glasses, either. Bennings, Inc., didn't have a bad day. After Indian Runner was scratched in the $7,500 handicap, we picked Sation and Time Supply one, two, and they finished in that order, heads apart. Sation supplied a merry $20.20 mutuel. We also advertised Early Dawn, $8, and Macadam, $10.60, and are deserving of at least an assist on Bright Bird's victory. Clocker Mike did a fair job down at Timonium with three winners.

BILL.

First race—Just to be different, I'm going to try to put over a good thing in the first race. Cooney goes for the Bennings dough in the opener and I'm depending on Jockey Saunder to bring him home. Tracker and Hogan's Fox for the other awards.

Second race—Sonnelli shapes up well in this field. Gets only steadying weight and is in possession of his stretch kick. Marge gets a break in the weight and will be out there hustling. Yancey for the show end.

Third race—Tell Why must break from the outside, but in a speedy youngster which can overcome this handicap, I do believe. Deserves top ranking in this group. Billie Wise and Resurrection for the place and show.

Fourth race—Chinese Empress is the same speedy miss that has been operating successfully this season. She is as sharp as a tack and looks every inch a winning favorite. Kawagoe and Cutie Face are the best of the others.

Fifth race—Moralist has to have a cheap field in which to show a winning effort. This is about the right kind of company and I'm stringing along. Saint Kitts could make trouble if the top one is not just right. Forewarned to complete the money bracket.

Sixth race—Traffic Judge, fast and fairly honest in his old age, should take care of this field. Hobnail has shown signs of running one of his best races. Kindacorn to show.

Seventh race—Sun Shadow scratched today to await a crack at this group. Boy Crazy is a possible place proposition. Light Breeze for the rest.

Jack McCarron Winner at Congressional; Other Links News of Day.

IN a high-scoring orgy that saw 88 as the qualifying figure, Ed Mifflin, celebrated Labor Day yesterday by working out a 76, four over par, to win the medal in the annual Argyle Country Club golf championship.

Mifflin scored a brace of 38's for his winning total, as most of the better-known players at the club soared over the 80 mark, but managed to qualify. Even Hickman Greene, Maryland State amateur medalist, had a tough time mastering the tricky little layout and his best was an 82.

Cubs Defeat Reds, 6-4, Then Bow in Nightcap

Cincinnati, Sept. 3 (AP).—Trailing by four runs and seemingly whipped, the Cincinnati Reds came back to take the second game of a double-header from the Chicago Cubs, 6 to 4, today, after dropping the first game, 6 to 3.

In the nightcap Koenig's triple with the bases loaded tied the score in the seventh and Bottomley's triple drove in Koenig to put the Reds ahead. Lombardi's homer in the eighth only made the game more secure.

The Reds were having the best of a pitching duel between Frey and Warneke in the first game until Gabby Hartnett tied the score at three-all with his homer in the ninth. Taking heart, the Cubs bunched three singles, a sacrifice, a hit-by-pitcher and a pop-out for three winning runs in the tenth.

Remington Is Defeated By Warrenton, 11-6

Remington, Va., Sept. 3 (Spl.).—The Remingtons dropped the last game of a three-game series with the Springs, of Warrenton, who were leading, 11 to 6, when darkness stopped play in the eighth inning. Currier, pitching for the Springs, held Remington to six hits, while Welch, on the mound for Remington, allowed nine.

Manassas 18-5 Winner Over Ballston

Dreyfuss Hurls Fine Game to Cop First of North Virginia Play-Off.

IN the first game of the three-game series for the championship of Section B of the Northern Virginia League, the Manassas nine got away to a flying start yesterday when it lambasted the Ballston A. C. at Ballston by the tune of 18 to 5. The next games of the series will be played on Sunday at Manassas, when these teams hook up in a double-header. As one more Manassas victory would clinch the championship, the second game of the double-header may not be necessary.

Doc Dreyfuss, Manassas' veteran moundman, pitched a steady game and was never in danger. After the big guns of the Manassas batters swung into action, the issue was never in doubt.

Sanders Hits Homer.

The big blast of the day was a homer by Lester Sanders, Manassas left fielder, with the bases filled in the fifth inning. Shorty Sanders came through with three bingles out of three trips to the plate.

Winchester Defeats Woodstock, 7-2, 14-1

Winchester, Va., Sept. 3 (Spl.).—The Winchester Park Association ball team took both games in the twin bill over the Woodstock Athletic Club here today, 7 to 2 and 14 to 1. In the first game, Duvall, pitching for Park Association, struck out 12 men and allowed the visitors but 9 hits, while Park Association hammered out 12 hits off Dovel. Schreck led the batting for Winchester, hitting 3 out of 3, while Dovel attained 3 out of 4 for the Woodstock club.

Hook, Line and Sinker

By Jean Monk.

KENWOOD Beach and Governor Run, 18 miles up the bay from Solomons, entertained their first delegation of blues last Tuesday morning. The visitors arrived about 7 a. m., started their performance without delay, and adjourned about 2 p. m.

Harry Spigunal, of Washington, and Pitts Everetson, of Pittsburgh, Pa., were the entire welcoming committee. They immediately chartered one of Capt. George North's boats piloted by Capt. Weldon Parks, and sailed out for the opening ceremonies.

Spigunal and Everetson used No. 1½ and No. 2 drones, the usual length trolling lines, and 3, 5 and 8 ounce sinkers. They landed 60 bluefish, 3 to 5 pounds each. Capt. North said the fishermen offered no complaints about the blues refusing their drones. Seems that the minnows were not so plentiful and the fish were snapping at anything in sight.

Number of Schools.

W. W. Woodward, promoter of Kenwood Beach, told me Sunday afternoon that the visit was in the nature of a surprise, but in a few moments several residents got their spoons and lines ready, climbed into boats that were awaiting parties, and steamed into the schools. The fish were close inshore and there were a number of schools. Spoons flew this way and that way, lines were served by the savages, and in just an hour or two no one had spoons or sinkers.

Not to be outwitted by a mere fish, they tied strips of white cloth to ordinary hooks and landed several with such an outfit. And so, we awarded the gold shark tooth to Mr. Woodward for this interesting story.

Sunday afternoon was beautiful overhead, but the old bay was parading its whitecaps, the fifth day of a continuous northeaster. This column stated last Tuesday that a slight cold snap might bring the blues to the top, and Wednesday morning the northeaster arrived. I wish that weather man knew how to take a joke.

New Packing Plant.

Less than 100 cars were parked by the fishing piers at Solomons, and more than 40 of them were around the firm of J. C. Lore & Sons and the M. H. Woodburn Co. I stopped and talked fish. Capt. Dick Lore showed me through their new fish-packing plant. It is a model building of its kind.

Capt. Dick said Robert C. Hartley, of Gillispie, Pa., and a party of four others had just come in (about 3 p. m.) with 160 fish, 79 of them 1 to 5-pound trout. The spots were 1-pounders and half the croakers were in the 2 and 3 pound classes. Lieut. Norris, of the United States Marine Corps, Washington, brought in 32 trout and 53 croakers.

One party Saturday morning returned with 79 trout, 48 croakers, 12 spots and 15 bluefish. Another Saturday party landed 37 spots and 40 croakers. The 37 spots weighed exactly 37 pounds. Twenty of the croakers were kingbillies; the others were bulls, 2 and 3-pounders.

Culpeper Beats Harrisonburg In Opener

HARRISONBURG, Va., Sept. 3 (Spl.). — Culpeper won the first game of the Valley League championship series here today, defeating Harrisonburg, 8 to 7, in a game played on a wet field and in a light drizzle. Because of the threatening weather, the crowd was the smallest of the season.

Culpeper piled up a seven-run lead in the first four innings, knocking Southpaw Johnny Keister, the league's leading hurler, out of the box for the first time this season. Benny Good, who blanked Staunton yesterday, held Culpeper to two hits in six innings.

Lefty McIntyre was touched for 13 safeties, but he managed to hold on to the one-run lead.

The clubs play at Culpeper tomorrow and it is expected that Walter Beall will oppose Keister.

Scrivener, Star, As Elks Are Beaten, 8-3

Celtics Win Series Opener at Fredericksburg Behind 2-Hit Hurling.

ALEXANDRIA, Va., Sept. 3 (Spl.).—The St. Marys Celtics, behind the two-hit pitching of Lefty Scrivener, took the first game of a seven-game series from the Elks at Fredericksburg Sunday, 8 to 3. Scrivener had one bad inning, the second, walking three men, hitting a third and allowing one hit, and the Elks tallied three markers. From then on he granted only one other hit.

Pepco Barry starred at bat, hitting a triple, double and a single off the shoots of Lefty Stevens, who was on the mound for the vanquished.

Bobsey Turney, Edith Clarke Take Title

Triumph Over Sara Moore and Mrs. Miller in Three Sets.

A NEW women's doubles combination made itself a respected member of Washington's better feminine tennis teams yesterday when Mrs. Bobsey Turney and Edith Clarke won the Army and Navy Country Club's invitation tournament team title from the veteran duo of Sara Moore and Mrs. Dorette Miller, 6—4, 4—6, 6—2.

While the two Washington teams were battling it out for the doubles crown, Edith Moore, of Montclair, N. J., was administering a sound beating to Mary Cootes, of Alexandria to gain the singles championship loving cup decisively, 6—1, 6—0. The auburn-haired New Jerseyite had little trouble in disposing of the former Smith College champion, hitting the ball with reckless but accurate abandon in an impressive display of power.

Plenty to Spare.

Miss Clarke, tall, blonde women's champion of Haiti, teamed well with her experienced partner, Mrs. Turney, and the two won with plenty to spare in the third set, as their opponents gave way after holding the match on even terms for the first two chapters.

Washington's male tennis practitioners were promised one more crack at Barney Welsh, the unrivaled master of the game in these parts, last night, when the draw was made for the men's singles. Welsh was put at the top of a crack seeded list, with Dooly Mitchell, Ralph McElvenny, Bud Markey, Tony Latona, Tom Mangan, Frank Shore and Rickey Willis following in order.

Latona Faces Deck.

Only matches scheduled for today will be published, although the entire list of pairings was completed last night. At 2 o'clock Lawrence Sherry faces Bob Burwell; at 3:30 Latona meets Pat Deck in one of the feature matches of the early rounds, and at 5 o'clock Allen Blade plays Larry Phillips and Bud Markey clashes with M. A. Dorst.

Competitors and spectators are reminded that the Army and Navy courts are made of "hartru," a composition rock material which keeps the courts playable despite rainstorms and only the heaviest downpour may prevent scheduled matches from being played.

Wanderers Register Twin Bill Triumphs

Warrenton, Va., Sept. 3 (Spl.).—The Wanderers registered smashing victories over two visiting teams here.

In the first game, limited to seven innings by agreement, the Wanderers beat the Springs, also of Warrenton, 12 to 6. In the second the Wanderers annihilated the Forestville, Md., team 15 to 0. Childs, pitching for the Wanderers, struck out 14 men and allowed only five scattered hits.

Baltimoreans Beaten By Westminster, 10-9

Westminster, Md., Sept. 3 (Spl.).—Playing on the Herr diamond near Westminster, the Westminster A. A. defeated the Baltimore Postoffice Industrial League, 10-9, in a hard fought contest which was anybody's game until the final inning.

Shamer, local twirler, brought in the winning runs when he tripled in the eighth with two men on, and came home on an overthrow. The visitors after scoring six runs in the fourth inning maintained the lead until the last half of the eighth.

A total of 30 hits was made by both teams during the game. Shamer struck out seven men, while Gehrman, who held the mound position for the Baltimore nine, fanned five. Williamson, Baltimore first baseman, scored the only home run.

James Busick Winner Of Net Tourney Final

Salisbury, Md., Sept. 3 (Spl.).—James Busick, of Cambridge, Md., won the Del Marva tennis singles championship from James Hampton, of Princess Anne, this afternoon on the courts of the State Teachers College. Busick, University of Maryland's first ranking player in 1933, defeated Hampton in straight sets, 6—2, 6—0, 6—3.

His victory gives him one leg on the G. William Phillips Cup, symbol of men's singles championship for the Del Marva Peninsula. Hampton's service was erratic, though extremely effective when he could get in, but Busick's backhand and control were too much for his opponent.

The Post Sandlotter

THE Post week-day interleague championship series, which is slated to get under way tomorrow, promises to provide Washington sandlot fans with the outstanding baseball attractions of the season. The champions of seven-day leagues of The Post Association will contest for the championship.

The Departmental League will be represented by the strong G. P. O. nine. Heurich Brewers will uphold the prestige of the Industrial League. Kann's, which won both first and second half titles in the Department Store League, will attempt to continue its sensational play, but the competition will be much stiffer. Maryland Suburban League, a new league operating for the first time this season, will send the College Park nine to the play-off. The College Park nine, which is managed by Burt Shipley, baseball coach of the University of Maryland, is bound to make trouble for some teams. Grace A. C., champions of the Georgetown Church League, will send a strong nine into battle.

Steel Plants Expect Better Fall Demand

Small Orders Increase During Week; Output Cut to 18½.

Cleveland, Sept. 3.—While retrenchment to the five-day week for salaried employes in the iron and steel industry reflects subdued sentiment in the markets, a moderate improvement in demand is expected to set in this month and to gain momentum with fall season, states the magazine Steel.

Considered a forerunner of this, the number of small orders from a widely diversified list of steel consumers increased during the week, indicating depletion of general manufacturing stocks.

Steelmakers do not anticipate an early and marked gain in requirements from any of the leading consuming groups. The trend in Government expenditures for construction work and housing program, however, will be up as the winter approaches, and in the aggregate will take substantial amounts of steel, widely scattered.

Naval Ship Orders.

Seven thousand tons of steel has been placed for the navy ships recently awarded to private yards, and 3,000 tons additional is expected this week. The Navy Department will begin to take bids September 14 for 25,000 tons of steel for the 13 ships to be built in navy yards, and can be expected to be in the market over the next few months.

A sharp reduction in automobile production to barely 30,000 units resulted last week when Ford and other manufacturers continued closed. Output this week may increase slightly with the resumption of operations Tuesday, but during the month schedules will be held down rigidly to the level of retail demand.

Railroad freight advances, which if granted will lift the cost of pig iron production $1 a ton, are not expected to stimulate railroad purchasing. Nevertheless, some additional equipment may be placed this year, and the volume of miscellaneous buying shows a tendency to increase.

Freight Car Outlook.

The Pennsylvania is to decide early this month whether to go ahead with construction of 1,000 freight cars. If the Lehigh Valley obtains a loan from the Government, in addition to repairing 2,500 freight cars, it will buy 500 coal cars. Cambria & Indiana is endeavoring to obtain used trucks for repairing 1,000 hopper cars. Woodward Iron Co. is in the market for 60 50-ton iron ore cars, and Pittsburgh, Shawmut & Northern for 2 locomotives. Preliminary estimates indicate 105 freight cars were awarded in August, compared with 19 in July.

Largest steel tonnage requirements continue to originate in construction work. Structural awards for the week increased to 15,790 tons from 10,385 tons in the preceding week. Bids are to be taken shortly on 13,000 tons for New York's downtown postoffice; 18,000 tons of reinforcing bars and 5,000 tons of pipe for the Wiota, Mont., dam.

Shell Oil interests are reported placing a heavy tonnage of plates for refinery work in Venezuela, and the Sun Oil Co., Philadelphia, is contemplating construction of a 100-mile pipe line from Philadelphia to the northern New Jersey coast. A Pittsburgh district mill has sold 16,000 kegs of nails for export.

Test of Steel Prices.

This month may bring the first test of steel prices since their advance three months ago, consumers generally having operated thus far on stocks previously acquired. The industry seldom has been so dependent on stability of prices.

The reduction in steel salaries will save producers $10,000,000 a year, on the basis of July payments. That is about the deficit in the first quarter this year, but as the cut will apply to only one month this quarter it will be too late to keep the industry out of the red.

Scrap prices have sustained the sharpest loss this year, Steel's crap composite being off 25 cents to $9.58.

Steelworks operations last week were reduced two points to 18½ per cent, lowest since the second week in April, 1933. Chicago dropped 2 points to 27½; eastern Pennsylvania, 1½ to 18½; Youngstown, 3 to 18; New England, 4 to 25; Buffalo, 4½ to 19. Birmingham was up 5 to 30. Detroit held at 77; Pittsburgh, 10; Wheeling, 26; Cleveland, 15.

Steel's iron and steel price composite is down 5 cents to $32.17, while the finished steel index is unchanged at $54.

Maryland Bank Co. To Pay 2d Return

1,100 Depositors to Receive Dividend of 10 Per Cent.

Hagerstown, Md., Sept. 3 (Spl.).—A. C. Meirriam, examiner, announced that the second dividend of 10 per cent would be paid within two weeks to 1,100 depositors of the People's Banking Co., at Smithsburg, amounting to $35,066.

The bank closed at the same time as the Central Trust Co., Frederick, but a court order last year ordered the divorcement of the Smithsburg institution from the Central Trust and returned most of the former bank's assets as they existed at the time of the merger.

This is the second dividend paid this year, the first being 15 per cent of the total deposits.

Money Markets.

London, Sept. 3 (AP).—Bar gold advanced 2 pence to 141s 7d (United States equivalent $35.31 on basis of sterling opening at $4.96¾).

Money 1% per cent. Discount rates: Short bills, ¾; 3-month bills, 1 per cent.

Paris, Sept. 3 (AP).—Three per cent rentes 73 francs 75 centimes; 4½ per cent rentes 96 francs 80.

Exchange on London 74.67. The dollar was quoted at 14.94.

Farm Product Prices Change Little at Starting of September

Many Slight Variations Point Downward Owing to Holiday and Labor Difficulties; Wheat Still Sells Above $1; Corn Moves Higher.

U. S. Department of Agriculture, Bureau of Economics

Changes in prices of staple farm products were rather small at the beginning of September, but many of the slight variations recorded were in a downward direction, owing in part to holiday conditions and labor troubles. Spot cotton was inclined to sag below the 13 cents average.

Wheat was still selling well above $1 a bushel in central markets. Corn even strengthed a little, selling in the 80's and other grains were fairly steady to strong. Live stock trend was mixed, prices showing sharp gains on cattle, a setback from top prices in hogs and weak trend for sheep and lambs.

Prices were fairly well maintained for butter, cheese and eggs at levels not far beyond highest of last month and market position of these products continues favorable. Poultry markets are irregular and unsettled with increasing supplies of chickens and limited receipts of fowls. Potato, onion and apple markets are weak and draggy with slightly lower prices in city markets. Lettuce prices tended upward on account of labor troubles in California producing sections and Eastern lettuce shared in the advancing trend.

Cotton Slightly Weaker.

Average spot cotton prices declined slightly below 13 cents near the end of last month for the first time in almost two weeks. Anticipation of labor troubles and the actual calling of a cotton-mill strike weakened the position. Prices of securities also declined, but most commodity prices remained about the same or advanced.

Cotton cloth prices continued firm with some advances in the most active constructions. Rains in the cotton States have reduced picking activity and there appears to be considerable uncertainty as to the effect of recent rains in the drought area. Sales of spot cotton increased but did not equal the trade movement of a year ago.

The domestic wheat crop is not much more than half the five-year average and the situation would be more serious but for the large world-wide holding of about 1,000,000,000 bushels of old wheat which will tend to keep prices within bounds. On the other hand, the announced intention to continue crop control in this country has given renewed confidence in the long-term market outlook. Rye markets have fully kept pace with wheat markets because of threatened scarcity resulting from light crops in most of the rye producing countries. Current market action awaits further world crop development and the course of the markets on other commodities.

Corn Prices Advance.

Price of corn has been rising because of lightest crops in many years, nearly 1,000,000,000 bushels below average, and still greater crop shortage of other feed grains. Much of the "loan" corn has been sold at considerable profit to growers. Oats and barley are half the average crop and price has risen steadily with the corn market.

Increased mill output of wheat feeds, together with some slackening in demand, resulted in lower prices of bran and middlings at the end of August. Consumer demand in the East was slow and sales were light, and demand slackened also in Central Western markets.

Linseed meal was barely steady to slightly lower, cottonseed meal and soybean meal sold unchanged in some markets and $1 higher in others. Production was light and demand limited. Prices of 37 per cent meal dropped $1 at Minneapolis and $1.50 at Buffalo. Supplies of soybean meal were very light.

Live Stock Receipts Increase.

Receipts of commercial cattle at 11 central markess increased about 64,000 head the last five days of August. Calf receipts were about 2,000 head larger and those of sheep and lamp gained 42,000, but hog runs were over 40,000 head below those of the week before and nearly 180,000 less than for corresponding time a year earlier.

Prices of all killing classes of cattle at Chicago advanced 50 to 75 cents near the end of August. The bulk of sales of fed steers and yearlings ranged $7 to $10, averaging $8.75 compared with $6.70 in mid-August. Most sales of the better grade, medium weight hogs were made at $7.85 to $7.90, a little below the top prices of August. The recent top on native lambs was $7.25 and the bulk of good and choice kinds were selling from $6.25 to $6.50. Most of the native ewes sold from $1.50 to $2.50. Only a limited supply of feeding lambs was available, most of them selling from $6 downward.

Prices of Ohio wools and similar fleeces were irregular, with no favorable sales and few inquiries reported. Continued dullness of the market and uneasiness over the general market situation occasioned some willingness to shade asking prices that had been unchanged for several weeks. Fair quantities of mohair were moved but at levels considerably lower than recent asking prices.

Drug Industry Record Is Best Since 1929

Sales of Stores Climb Steadily Each Month During 1934.

New York, Sept. 3.—From the standpoint of the wholesaler and manufacturer of drugs, the first six months of 1934 proved to be one of the best periods since 1929.

The value of production for the first half of the year was excess of that for the entire ten months of 1933, and the unit output made a gain nearly as large.

In most districts, drug store sales have shown an increase every month thus far over the distributive totals for the comparative periods of 1933, with a pronounced gain in the call for luxury items.

Gains Taper Off.

Up to May this increase averaged around 30 to 35 per cent, but the recession which set in at that time led to a gradual tapering-off, so that volume now is not averaging better than 15 to 20 per cent above that of a year ago.

The better showing was not easy of attainment, as in most cases it has been the result of hard work and extensive advertising, with special sales one of the strongest factors in the achievement of the better position.

Present indications are favorable for business during the last six months equaling or exceeding that for the first half of the year, although much will depend on the extent of Government financing of farmers in the drought sections.

Increase in Staples.

In some quarters, the opinion is held that the increase in the price of grains, cotton and tobacco will offset materially the adverse effect of the drought and that business can be expected to hold to a better level than last year in all but the sections where complete losses were sustained.

The profit margin, however, is becoming smaller, as retailers are findnig it more expensive to maintain volume, and manufacturers have been unable to pass along to their retail outlets the increased NRA and similar costs, according to a survey of the drug and pharmaceutical supply trade, which has just been completed by Dun & Bradstreet, Inc.

Foreign Markets.

(Associated Press.)

London—Trading on the stock exchange was inactive today. Gilt-edged securities, home rails and rubber shares declined, and kaffirs eased on lack of support. Oil shares were quiet, German bonds firm, and transatlantic issues dull. The market closed irregular.

Paris—The textile strike in the United States caused prices on the bourse to turn heavy today, international and industrial issues losing fractions to a point. The closing was heavy.

Berlin—Stimulated by occasional spurts of public buying, prices on the boerse held steady throughout the day. The closing was firm with mining shares leading the way.

Sweet Potato Yield Brings Good Price

Maryland Growers Pile Up Profits; Tomato Values Steady.

Pocomoke City, Md., Sept. 3 (Spl.).—A large number of Worcester County sweet potato growers are coming out of the red, according to W. Coulbourne Wilson, truck-farmer of this city. Sweet potatoes have not sold for less than $2.30 in this section and in most cases the yield has been fair with the result that a large number of farmers have been able to make money in spite of the fact that they lost money on the Irish potato crop.

Tomatoes have sold at a profit-making price all this year, although at many times the margin of profit was very small. Cucumbers, beans, peas and butterbeans have all brought fair prices and some occasions very large prices.

Unfortunately a large part of the farm lands of this county was planted in Irish potatoes which sold far below the price of production, leaving the farmers unable to repay the money borrowed to raise the crop.

New York Bank Stocks Turn Lower for Week

New York, Sept. 3.—New York City bank stocks displayed a reactionary tone during the past week, increasing the yield on the average to a 5⅞ per cent basis. The aggregate value of 16 leading issues, according to records compiled by Hoit, Rose & Troster, totaled $1,366,088,000 on August 31, as compared with $1,426,069,000 at the close of the previous week, a decrease of $59,981,000 or 4.21 per cent.

The current average yield of the 16 issues of 5.86 per cent compares with a yield of 5.61 per cent on August 25. The current market value is now 1.12 times their known book value, compared with 1.17 times on August 25, and based upon current figures the 16 issues are now quoted at an average of 9.7 times their known earnings, against 10.2 times a week ago.

Non-Ferrous Metals Prices Gain in Week

General Buying Attracted From Many Points as Sales Double.

New York, Sept. 3 (AP).—An advance of $1 per ton on an expanding volume of business featured the nonferrous metals in the past week.

The recent price reduction attracted general buying from battery makers, ammunition, paint and cable manufacturers, all of whom were credited with taking fresh supplies. The week's sales were estimated at about double the summer's weekly average.

Zinc held steady until late in the week when it eased owing to stagnant consuming interest as a result of small galvanizing operations, as well as because of increased ore production.

Largest Since 1930.

Last week's output in the tri-State district was said to have been the largest since the fall of 1930. Ample water supplies aided mining operations.

Tin was lower as a result largely of the weakness of sterling exchange. Demand was slow and consumers were said to be turning to substitutes in some instances. Tin plate demand was disappointing and operations underwent a further reduction to 40 per cent of capacity, as compared with 60 per cent early in the month.

Canning demand has fallen below expectations and supplies accumulated during the threatened steel strike are now being utilized.

Copper was quiet and steady at the basis of 9 cents for Blue Eagle electrolytic and sales have been on a moderate day to day basis. While the domestic market presented little or no feature, foreign purchases picked up a fair volume as the export price turned easier.

Antimony Is Quiet.

Antimony was quiet and unchanged with demand limited to small prompt lots.

Steel operations eased a shade further to the lowest level since March, 1933, as rail orders were completed and miscellaneous orders were insufficient to maintain operations. The trade expected continued quietness over the Labor Day holidays, but some hopefulness for better demand was attributed to prospective awards for 24 vessels by the Navy Department and increased structural awards.

Scrap prices were easier but finished quotations and pig iron prices have been reaffirmed for the fourth quarter.

First Tobacco Exchange Set To Open Soon

Trading to Start Thursday; Hedging Is Seen as Important Aid.

By W. R. Huff.

New York, Sept. 3 (AP).—Tobacco, America's third largest cash crop, will have an organized market place for spot and futures trading, for the first time, when the New York Tobacco Exchange opens for business, scheduled for next Thursday.

Strange as it may appear to those who know tobacco only through smoking it, tobacco alone of all the important commodity staples of world trade has never, anywhere in the world, had an organized and recognized futures exchange.

Other commodities—cotton, wheat, sugar, corn, hogs, silver, coffee, silk, wool, butter and eggs, hides and leather, rubber, cocoa—have trading places in New York and other cities. Wheat has had an organized exchange in the United States for 75 years, cotton for 60.

But tobacco, which outranks many of these products in its contribution to America's domestic and foreign trade, has been bought and sold largely at private auctions, and through hogshead markets, country sales and cooperate marketing. These methods vary widely, and as the methods vary, so do the prices the farmer receives for his crop.

In addition to being the third largest agricultural crop in money value, tobacco holds a vital place in foreign commerce, standing fourth in the value of exports, after cotton, automobiles and petroleum. It ranks tenth among imports. Its farm value of some $300,000,000 becomes a finished manufactured value of some $1,000,000,000 annually.

Still more important, the tobacco industry pays the U. S. Government more than $400,000,000 a year in taxes, averaging in the past few years between 10 and 20 per cent of the Nation's total tax revenues.

Sponsors of the new tobacco exchange stress the "hedging" feature as perhaps the most important advantage the market will have to offer.

Cotton — Buying and covering pushed cotton prices down into new low levels for the movement for the half session. Liquidation and nervousness over the textile strike and labor situation also aided in the decline.

Wool Goods Business Records Advance Over Previous Week

New York, Sept. 3.—Wool goods business registered moderate improvement last week as compared with the previous week, according to the New York Wool Top Exchange Service, but merchants anticipate no substantial buying movement until after Labor Day. Several mills opened lines of tropical worsted fabrics for the summer, 1935, season at prices 10 to 15 per cent below the price that ruled a year ago.

"Clothing manufacturers specializing in summer apparel are understood to have placed appreciable initial orders on these lightweight cloths," says the Exchange Service. "Business on overcoatings for nearby delivery was broader than for some time. Women's wear cloakings and dress goods continued to sell in good volume. Operations in this field, however, were still marked by caution, and garment manufacturers purchased only their pressing requirements. Sales of fall garments at retail to date have been unsatisfactory. Wool dresses, however, are selling well with checks and plaid designs leading in favor.

"Despite larger sales, manufacturing operations showed little change. A number of firms adhered to their decision to close plants for two weeks in September, both for the purpose of guarding against accumulations of merchandise and for mechanical repairs. Threats of a general strike caused little concern. It is believed that the union will withdraw its plan for a strike in wool goods mills and concentrate on the cotton textile industry.

"A number of operators of smaller mills are endeavoring to bring about forced curtailment of production. They propose that the industry be put on a single shift 40-hour week. The proposal, however, is likely to be sidetracked as many mills have grown tired of restrictions and would prefer to operate in conformance with the laws of supply and demand.

"The industry of late has become promotion-minded and all indications point to the launching of a program soon that will have for its purpose increased sales of wool products. An effort will also be made to teach the public the value of all-wool fabrics as compared with wool mixed fabrics."

Pipe Order Placed.

New York, Sept. 3 (AP).—The Public Service Co. of New Jersey has placed an order for 180 tons of 8-inch pipe with the U. S. Foundry & Machine Co.

Canada Bonds Yield Lowest In 30 Years

New York, Sept. 3.—The excellent progress toward economic recovery now being made in Canada was further evidenced in August in several new issues of provincial bonds, according to a review prepared by Dominion Securities Corporation. Both the provinces of Ontario and Quebec obtained new money at the lowest cost for provincial financing on record, or at least since the period of low money rates which prevailed at the beginning of the century.

The Province of Quebec's $10,000,000 of 5-year 3 per cent bonds were sold on a 2.95 per cent yield basis. The Ontario loan of $37,500,000 bore 2½ per cent coupons and also were sold to yield 2.95 per cent for the 5-year maturity. This issue, however, included 1 to 5 year bonds, the 3-year maturity being sold as low as on a 2.70 per cent basis.

The other provincial offering was a $3,000,000 4 per cent issue of the Province of Saskatchewan. These bonds were long term, maturing in 1953, and were sold to yield 5¼ per cent. This was a considerable improvement, for two years ago this province had to pay 6½ per cent for funds.

Total bond sales through August this year are lower than in the corresponding period of 1933, due entirely to reduced Dominion government financing. The following table shows in detail the bond sales for 1934 and 1933:

Cotton Prices Decline Under Labor Fears

Market Is Only 20 Points Above Season's Low Reached August 3.

By Frank L. Weller.

Anticipation of labor troubles and actual calling of the textile strike had an influence on cotton during the week, but the market did not lose sight of the Government's willingness to advance 12 cents a pound in loans to farmers.

Traders looke upon the loan as an underpinning of prices and expected little presure from country offerings.

A report from Corpus Christi, Tex., said Southern farmers are going to sell enough cotton to meet some of their expenses but let the remainder of it ride on the 12-cent loan.

$15 Profit.

They made about $15 a bale profit on the 10-cent loan which preceded the current Government advance and operators expect them to hold out for as much or more on the 1934 crop.

Momentarily, buyers were timid in the face of a threatened textile strike and by Thursday of last week cotton prices had declined 26 points below those of August 24 and were only 20 points above the low point of the season reached on August 3.

The average price of middling seven-eighth-inch cotton on August 30 was 12.98 cents a pound compared with 13.24 cents the week before and 9.05 cents on the corresponding day a year ago.

Sales of spot cotton continue to increase seasonally over earlier weeks but are below sales for the corresponding periods in the last two seasons.

98,000 Bales Sold.

The ten big markets were reported to have sold about 98,000 bales in the last five days compared with 54,000 bales for the same length of time last week and 100,000 bales last year.

The marketing of cotton has been delayed this season and more than a normal increase in sales may occur. The smaller crop will result in smaller sales for the season as a whole. Reports from some sections indicate a limited amount of selling of "dime-loan" cotton. Recent rains also have reduced picking activity and this may tend to reduce sales during the next week or two.

Football in Virginia...

Virginia Bureau of The Post.
Richmond, Va., Sept. 3.

THE late Mr. Edison's mazdas are doubtless burning tonight very late in the cozy little offices where football coaches in Virginia colleges do their deepest plotting. Like the Old Inn Door that Alfred Noyes wrote about, the portals are locked and barred. Window shades are drawn. The light of the tapers is cutting the gray billows of tobacco smoke. There is no talk but of football.

The squads are at Virginia, Washington and Lee, William and Mary, Emory and Henry, Virginia Tech, V. M. I., and Roanooke. All except Roanoke's squad of 30 reported today for the first drills. The Lutherans jumped the gun and started Saturday—which they have a perfect right to do. Who, pray tell, would begrudge those Salem boys and Coach Pap White one wee extra day in the face of that 11-game schedule of theirs? That is one more game than any other outfit in Virginia is to play——and that terrifying parade starts in less than two weeks. Only Emory and Henry gets under way in as big a hurry.

The Coach is Gloomy.

What could a Peeping Tom hear beneath those curtained windows through which he can's peep? Only such as this: "Strong side," "weak side," "down the field," "that guy musta been sitting around drinking beer all summer," ad infinitum. A snooper would go away convinced of one thing—that jollity is sadly absent in these cubby-hole sanctums. Verily, there is no human quite as gloomy as a football coach at close of the first day of practice.

Everybody looks so awkward to him, and so slow. The star halfback or the giant tackle hasn't reported, or, if he has, he's overweight. A million things are inevitably wrong. It's the Labor Day Blues of football.

At Hampden-Sydney, where the popular Charley Bernier is getting set to turn out a team that ought to be one of the best in the young Chesapeake conference, the boys are just trekking in. They will start the training grind Tuesday. At Ashland, some 60 miles east of Bernier's stronghold, Coach Norman Shepard is busy mapping the morrow's program at Randolph-Macon. Shepard's stinging Yellow Jackets may give the Tigers a run for that Chesapeake loop crown, which now is roosting on the shaded Ashland campus.

Bridgewater College, which, with American University, of Washington, completes the Chesapeake loop, has a shorter schedule than other Old Dominion elevens and does not plan to start training until September 13.

Cavaliers Face Task.

Over at Charlottesville, where the Virginia Cavaliers started tuning up today, Head Coach Gus Tebell and his line coach, "Butch" Slaughter, found lots of worries without going out and looking for them. Four of Virginia's first team linemen of last year are gone, along with two prize backs. Tebell, who this year adds the duties of head football coach to those of head basketball and baseball mentor, isn't embarking on any uneventful cruise. He faces certain squalls, what with a ticklish proposition of building up morale and having to develop a lot of green material. Moreover, such foes as Navy and Dartmouth loom as 80-mile-an-hour gales, not to mention possible simoon tendencies of Maryland, Washington and Lee, Virginia Tech and North Carolina on his nine-game schedule.

The Washington and Lee Generals hit the trail this morning for Nimrod Hall, over on the Cowpasture River, where many a fish has been snatched out of its element. Here Warren (Tex IID) Tilson, now starting his second season as "Kingfish" of W. and L. football, craves that his husky squad of 45 men will snatch again that flaming competitive spirit that carried it far along the trail last year. And Tilson can dangle bait marked "Spirit" before the eyes of his boys in a way that makes it every whit as enticing and irresistible as a "weedless widow" bait to a bass.

New Deal at Richmond.

There is an aroma of a "New Deal" at University of Richmond on the eve of the first drill Tuesday morning. Not only are the Spiders mobilizing under a new coach—Glenn Thistlewaite, late of Northwestern, Wisconsin, and Carroll College. They have a new color scheme—flaming red instead of traditional somber blue, says Phil Gulley, enterprising Spider sports scribe. Evidently, Glenn Thistlewaite is no stranger to psychology.

But there is one item on the "new" side that Thistlewaite didn't want. It's a new line—almost. Five of the seven regulars who cleared the way last fall aren't heading back to Westhampton.

I rather like the looks of the V. M. I. squad. Forty-five aspirants for places on the squadron showed lots of zip on Alumni Field, at the institute this morning. There are schools in Virginia that wouldn't swap their squad for V. M. I.'s. But throw the Keydets' fighting qualities into the deal; then figure profit and loss. Several Virginia schools may wish before December comes that they could have had Bill Raftery's boys when the going was toughest.

Approximately 40 men trooped in for the first workout at William and Mary. Tommy Dowler, it appears, is going to do most of the coaching, while his so-called "coordinate coach," one "Similin' John" Kellison, scouts around and brings his buddy the latest on each future foe. Tommy is an enterprising chap (ask some of Colgate's football rivals!) but he will have to say o'er and o'er, after the manner of the late Dr. Coue, "Day by day I get less and less superstitious." Exactly 13 of the lads who kicked up so much dust in Richmond stadium last Thanksgiving don't live down in Williamsburg any more. But Tommy Dowler knows his wing backs a la Andy Kerr and "Smilin' John" can play to a rival's defense with the best of them.

V. P. I. Must Rebuild.

Henry Redd likewise faces the loss of 13 letter men at Virginia Tech, and 8 of them were first-team gridders. 'Twas a busy quartet of coaches that put the Tech squad through two drills today. Earl (Tex IV) Tilson came to town to help his brother, Sumner (Tex I) Tilson, with 27 line candidates. Redd is in Tommy Dowler's shoes exactly, except that his sophomores look a bit stronger than Tommy's.

Coach "Pedie" Jackson, the mighty midget of Emory and Henry, welcomed 35 men to training camp at Emory. If Pedie has any worries tonight it's about his schedule and not his squad. He lost only two men from his fine '33 squad and he's got hustlers to take their places. A lot of the so-called "big boys" weren't hankering after playing dates that Pedie proffered them. But the much-admired lord and king of Emory has his share of the tough ones anyhow, with William and Mary, Richmond, Wake Forest, Marshall nad Chattanooga among others.

BLACKIE BEAR
By D. SAM COX

Grandma Tells About Her Wedding Day.

Everybody knows about the curiosity of children. Even children know that they have a lot of it. It was night again at Mountain House, and they were having their supper of roasted nuts and things around the fireplace. Jenny hadn't forgotten that Grandma didn't tell them last night why she left her good home with her mistress and went back to the wild life in the woods. She had just as well know all about it, and so she asked Grandma why she left such a good home.

"Well, I reckon Grandpa had something to do with it," Grandma said. "One day when I had grown up to be a big girl, my mistress brushed my coat off mighty good until it looked right pretty and shiny, and she took me to town with her. She met some friends there, and they talked about going about and seeing things, and they decided to go out to some kind of a park that they called a "zoo," as I remember it.

Anyway, there were lots of different kinds of woodsfolks in there, and most of them were in little houses that had wire or bars or something all around them. I ran around and peeped in at a lot of them and then I came to one that had a right nice-looking young black bear in it, and he was just about my size. He seemed nice and friendly, and we said "howdy" through the wire. My mistress saw us talking through the wire, and she asked the man that was looking after all of the woodsfolks if he wouldn't turn his bear out in the big lot and let him play with me. The little bear's house had a wire fence all around it, and the man wasn't afraid that his bear would get out in the woods, and so he turned him out.

We played around while the man was showing the people the other woodsfolks and birds and fishes and things, and pretty soon we were up near the gate. When the people went in, they pulled the gate shut, but they didn't hook or lock it, and when I butted that other bear against the gate, it flew open, and there he was out in the road, rolling over in the sand. When he got up he started to run as fast as he could right toward the woods, and I ran right after him. The people didn't seem to see us, and so they didn't try to catch us. When we got to the woods, that other bear kept right on running, and so did I.

After a while he stopped and I caught up with him. We both sat down to rest, for we were tired. He just sat there and looked at me, and it seemed to me that he was smiling in a mighty friendly way, but I thought he was just looking at my pretty slick coat. And then he smiled friendlier than ever and said, "Let's not go back." I just sat there and looked about as if I hadn't heard him, but I was thinking mighty hard. There wasn't any bear back at the house for me to play with—nothing but cats and dogs, and this certainly was a nice young man, and he seemed to know how to play. I was still looking around and trying to think what to say, when he said again, "Let's not go back."

I don't know just what I said or did, but the first thing I knew we were trotting along together, and after a while we came to that great big tree where we were living that day when Blackie went to sleep in the eagle's nest, after staining my tablecloth with the juice of a cherry pie.

"And I am sure you might have done worse, as Blackie would say," Grandpa said, as he took his pipe out of his mouth and grinned like Billie Possum. "Don't you remember what a fat rabbit I gave you for a wedding present?"

26 Juniors Seek D. C. Golf Crown

Billy Shea, of Congressional; Bobby Brownell, of Manor; Jack Keele, of Argyle, and Harvey Johnson, of Columbia, will be heavy favorites in the District Junior Golf championship which opens tomorrow at Indian Spring with a field of 26 youngsters competing in the 18-hole qualifying round.

Pairings and starting times released last night showed that every well-known junior golfer under 18 years of age, with the exception of Champion Billy Dettweiler, is entered. Dettweiler is embarking tomorrow for Brookline to participate in the National Amateur championship.

Post entries will be accepted. Two days of match play follow the medal round.

Pairings and starting times:

9:30. Dick Meyer (Manor) and Willard Leizear (Indian Spring); 9:35. Jim Thompson (Columbia) and Bobby Shelton (Columbia); 9:40. Bill Leizear (Indian Spring) and Bobby Bowie (Columbia); 9:45. Earl Skinker (Columbia) and D. Wilmer (Chevy Chase); 9:50. Sam Wolfe (Indian Spring) and Sam Watkins (Columbia); 9:55. David Hunt (Congressional) and Elwood Brinkley (Indian Sprig).

10:00. Bobby Brownell (Manor) and Jack Dettweiler (Congressional); 10:05. Billy Shea (Congressional) and Jack Keele (Argyle); 10:10. Jim Brownell (Manor) and Harvey Johnson (Columbia); 10:15. Junior Slater (Columbia) and Ralph Bogart (Army-Navy); 10:20. George Plather (Columbia) and Eric King (Army-Navy); 10:25. Billy Rochelle (Indian Spring) and Jack Higgins (Bannockburn); 10:30. J. A. Jones (Belle Haven) and Carl Borden (Congressional).

U. S. Singles

Montreal, when their match was interrupted. The Canadian dominated the play in the first set to win the opening chapter, 6—2, and almost eclipsed the Czech in the second set with his deep forehand drives and backhand chops.

Menzel, making his initial appearance in the American championship and more accustomed to hard courts, had difficulty with his footing and frequently slipped. The first 18 games of the second set were won on service. Longtin "blew" a chance to cop the set when he netted a set-up overhead smash for set point in the fourteenth game. Tiring under the strain of the protracted chapter, Longtin couldn't hold on to his delivery in the nineteenth game and Menzel won the twentieth at love to take the set, 11—9. Menzel overcame a 1—3 deficit in the third set and ran through five games to win it, 6—3.

Bryan (Bitsy) Grant, the "giant killer" from Atlanta, won the first set 6—3, from the veteran Manuel Alonso, of New York, and was trailing, 3—4, in games in the second when play was halted. Alonso came to life in the second set and frequently passed Grant at the net with wide whiplash forehand drives.

DICK TRACY — The Visible and the Invisible

Walt Mason, Himself

The Old Way.

Long ago, when I was young, people had their aches and ills; doctors viewed the patient's togue and prescribed three kinds of pills. "You will take some six or eight," said the doc, "before each meal, and they soon will set you straight, like an acrobat you'll fell." Then no learned physician said, while the patient wept and cried, "You must live on sawdust bread, with pine shavings on the side. Is there anything you like, anything for which you long? Dodge it, in the name of Mike, if you would be hale and strong. Are you fond of pumpkin pie, or of shortcake splashed with cream? If you eat them you will die, and be buried by the stream. Are you fond of T-bone steak or potatoes nicely browned? If you eat them you will take an apartment underground." Old-time doctors had few frills of the scientific sort; they depended on their pills, which they dished up by the quart. They would feel the patient's wrist, and his tongue they would survey, and remark, "You need, I wist, half a pint of pills today." At their methods we may sneer in this most progressive age, their prescriptions would look queer to the scientific sage. But their patients didn't croak any faster, I am sure, than do those afflicted folk who adopt a modern cure. Every hamlet had its dame who was 99 years old, patriarchs, though gray and lame, lived to chatter and to scold. People journeyed down the slope of the shadowed western hills, buoyed up by the old doc's dope and supported by his pills.

Rialto to Open for Season September 13 With "There's Always Tomorrow"

Film to Usher In Fall Schedule On Ninth Street

Willard's 'Drunkard' Takes Brief Vacation; News of Stage, Screen.

By Gerald G. Gross
(Batting for Nelson B. Bell).

The Rialto Theater is on the verge of coming out of its Ninth street summer siesta which has persisted these several months. On September 13, or a week from Thursday, superstition will be defied with the opening presentation of "There's Always Tomorrow," according to very authoritative information which reached this department yesterday.

Rodney Collier, managing director, is scheduled to return to Washington this morning to open the advertising campaign. So steel yourselves for approaching bulletins about Binnie Barnes, Frank Morgan and Lois Wilson, who have the leading roles in this Universal production inaugurating the 1934-1935 season at the Rialto.

Frank Morgan, whom we usually think of as a stage actor, will therefore be available at two downtown houses simultaneously, for he has a role in "The Affairs of Cellini," coming to the Palace September 14. "There's Always Tomorrow" is the first American picture to feature Miss Barnes, seen at RKO-Keith's last week, but best remembered here for her Catherine of Aragon opposite Charles Laughton's Henry VIII.

Succeeding attractions at the Rialto will include "Million Dollar Ransom," "Gift of Gab," and "Wake Up and Dream," just as the regular conductor of this column revealed last Thursday when he also prophesied the mid-September opening.

Because of banking complications, "The Drunkard" takes a day off tonight—a night off today—anyway, "The Drunkard" will not go on this evening atop the Willard Hotel. Said complications are, to wit and as follows, that the American Institute of Banking is holding a meeting tonight in the grand ballroom which by now has grown accustomed to housing P. T. Barnum's hero. The usual performances will be given Thursday and Saturday nights, it is announced. Not only that but there may be a special show on Friday evening to make up for tonight's defection. Definite word should be out tomorrow.

A Call for Performers.

New York note—"No More Ladies," the A. E. Thomas play which enjoyed a Broadway run last season, reopened yesterday afternoon at the Morosco. In the cast are Mary Sargent, Walter Pidgeon, Daphne Warren Wilson, Nicholas Joy, Robert Lowes, Marcella Swanson and others, some of them newcomers and the others playing the parts they had in the original production. "No More Ladies" is scheduled to open a week's stay in Washington October 1, probably at the National.

Local singers, guitar players and ballet dancers are invited to communicate with Miss Jeanne Stevens if they are interested in a series of vignettes, in dramatic and dance form, which are planned for this fall. The first will be entitled "Waltzes in Paradise" and will deal with the French colonization of Alabama, resembling somewhat the "Bal des Valses" produced in Paris by Baron Nicolas de Gunzburg.

Miss Stevens, who has been associated with "Wake Up and Dream," "Lysistrata" and other professional theatrical ventures of the past few years, may be reached mornings by telephoning District 4704, extension 710.

The Columbia Players will meet at 8:30 o'clock tonight at the home of Margery Rice Cunningham, 2127 California street, to complete plans for the opening of their 1934-1935 season.

Realism and Pigs' Knuckles.

"The Affairs of Cellini," that United Artists release en route to the Capital, is an interesting example of the progress Hollywood has made in reproducing sound accurately. A few years ago it was necessary to resort to ingenious substitution in order to get the right effect, like throwing a block of wood against steel to simulate a door slam or employing a human imitator when a lion's roar was needed. No more of that.

The trend toward realism is manifested most spectacularly in "Cellini" in the giant banquet scene where 300 guests plow into a vast setup of roast pheasant, stuffed pig and scores of other gastronomic assailants. And it's the real thing that's set before them, and not so much property food.

When Benvenuto (Frederic March) cracks a pig knuckle at the feast table, it will be a real pig's knuckle. When the Florentines pour their drinks and you hear that "gurgle gurgle" 'twill be the actual sound. When sword meets sword in one of the swashbuckling duels which the film boasts, you will be hearing the genuine clash of steel on steel. When Constance Bennett, Mrs. March's costar, does this or that you'll be hearing this or that exactly as you see it.

That banquet scene fabricated by Director LaCava must be a lulu. He is said to have instructed the chef of a leading Los Angeles hotel to prepare all of the rich viands necessary. Peasants phigs—pardon—pheasants, pigs, rare venison and fowl, subtle souffles and jellies and fruits of all descriptions. All photographed and served just as though the place was Florence and the time sixteenth century Italy.

Those dishes, mind you, had to be re-heated and freshened on each shooting day at a cost of $1,000. Had prop foods been used, as in the old days, the total outlay in this respect would not have exceeded $100. But LaCava wanted realism and he got it and so will the cash customers.

Our nomination for the headliner of the week in Washington is Upton Sinclair, who will be a guest speaker at the National Press Club luncheon tomorrow. That makes the big "Oil" man from the West Coast nominated twice.

Harry Hunter and Charles Kranz, who were to have officiated as Kings for the Day at the group's luncheon next Monday, won't get to do their stuff until September 17 because the affair has been postponed until that date.

Burned Women Fight for Life

2 in Yacht Blast Sunday Given Even Chance to Survive Injuries.

Mrs. Elizabeth Martin and Miss Ethel Weakley, both of Washington, were gaining in their fight for recovery in Alexandria Hospital last night from burns received in the explosion of the yacht Greyhound on the Potomac River near Alexandria early Sunday.

Hospital authorities said their condition remained critical, however, and gave them an even chance to live. Mrs. Martin was the most severely seared on arms and legs.

The women were in the galley preparing a midnight lunch as the Greyhound glided off Shepherds Landing, opposite Alexandria, headed for the Chesapeake. Their companions, Mrs. Martin's husband, Harold Martin, and Hugh Smith, a Washington attorney and owner of the craft, were in the pilot house.

There was an explosion, presumably caused by a leaking gasoline line, in the hold stern. Flames shot high, trapping the women. Martin and Smith tried the fire extinguishers. Flames beat them back.

The women, in desperation, plunged through the fire. Martin and Smith threw them overboard. Members of the crews of the destroyers Fox and Humphreys put out in boats and pulled the four from the water. The boat turned to the water line.

The Martins live at 2022 Sixteenth street northwest and Miss Weakley at 1613 Harvard street. Smith has offices in the Southern Building.

The Federal Diary

During Morgan Baker's vacation the Federal Diary is being edited by Robert F. Whitney.

MISS CHARLOTTE B. WEBBER, 639 E street northeast, has retired from the Bureau of Navigation and Steamboat Inspection of the Department of Commerce after 43 years of service.

Miss Webber's retiremept is voluntary. She says she wants to be free to enjoy life while she is able. "This is the happiest day of my life," she said, "and the saddest," as her friends gathered around her to say farewell.

A large basket of flowers and a chair were given Miss Webber by her fellow employes.

The Society of Federal Translators will hold its regular monthly meeting next Monday at 8 p. m. in the Young Woman's Christians Association Building at Seventeenth and K streets northwest.

THE membership of the Hospital Guild of Local No. 2, National Federation of Federal Employes, has risen to 350 following the recent enrollment period in July when many Federal employes took advantage of the half-year membership offer, it was announced yesterday by Henry G. Nolda, (*) Veterans' Administration, treasurer. At the same time several members of the Bureau of Standards Local of the NFFE, No. 260, also subscribed to membership provided them by this special arrangement.

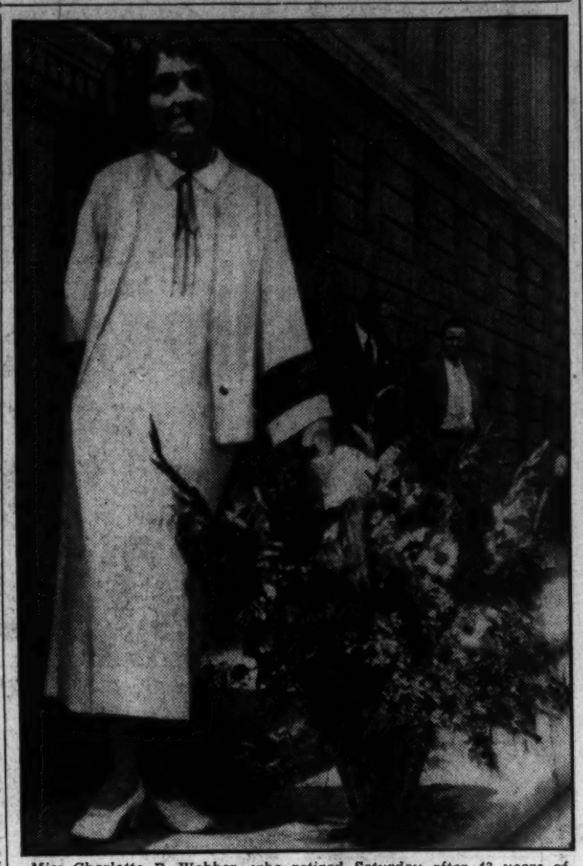
The hospital giulds in the Federal service here are maintained by the NFFE exclusively. More than a half-dozen departments have such beneficial organizations. The Federal Employes Union, No. 2, Hospital Guild is an incorporated association of the members of Union No. 2, who have made possible the spreading of risk by a yearly membership payment of $5. (usually payable in advance in February of each year).

The guild is a nonprofit association and none of its officers receive any salary or commissions. Membership entitles one to 28 days' hospitalization in any one year, which amounts to $3.25 per day. Any member of six months' good standing in Federal Employes Union No. 2 who is not suffering from a chronic ailment and is in good health is eligible to join the guild.

Officers of the Guild are: O. B. Bowman, president; Mrs. M. Dorothy Dick, vice president; Albert M. Reising, secretary, and Henry G. Nolda, treasurer.

The Miscellaneous Tax Unit Bowling League inaugurates its third season on Thursday at the Lucky Strike Bowling Alleys. The league was organized with eight teams in 1932; last year it was increased to 12, and this year 18 teams will compete. Joseph M. McKenna, Sales Tax Division, was reelected president. G. M. Van Hoesen, Estate Tax Division, is official scorer, and J. E. Beeton, Processing Tax Division, is secretary and treasurer. Interest is keen and the indications are that the race for the championship and new Bliss Trophy will be fought for as if the result hung on the outcome of each individual game.

The Bureau of Entomology will have a new unit at the Beltsville Research Center. A contract for a building, to be built there at a cost of $107,000, was signed last week.



Miss Charlotte B. Webber, who retired Saturday after 43 years of Government service. She was with the Bureau of Navigation and Steamboat Inspection of the Department of Commerce.

BRITISH STRIPE MANHATTAN SHIRTS
$2.50

Four distinct colors woven into stripings that are neutrally colorful . . . that's the trick that makes these British Stripe Shirts unique. Over in England they discovered that you could take red, blue, gray and tan threads and weave them into a shirting with the stripes so spaced that one color predominates. Manhattan has successfully interpreted that idea for us, with the difference that you don't have to pay exorbitant sums like $7 and $10 for a British made shirt. Collar attached or tab collar in your size and sleeve length.
